

Believe in Better: From Policy to Practice

Strengthening accountability relationships with and for young people

REPORT AND RESOURCE COMPENDIUM

December 2021

United Nations
Office of the Secretary-General's
Envoy on Youth

YOUTH2030
WORKING WITH AND FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

act:onaid

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Office of the UN Secretary General's Envoy on Youth and ActionAid would like to thank all the survey respondents and everyone from UN entities, youth organizations and governments in Albania, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Iraq, Jordan, Kenya, Kosovo, Lao PDR, Morocco, Niger, North Macedonia, Pakistan, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Serbia, Somalia, Sudan, Tanzania, Thailand, Togo, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Viet Nam and Zimbabwe who participated in the interviews and discussions, for their time in contributing to this study.

Cover photo: CREDIT: ActionAid

Foreword

Progress towards the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and its goals will not be achieved without the participation, ideas and energy of young people. Indeed, many of the challenges we face – from climate change and poverty to human rights and the inclusion of marginalized groups in public life – disproportionately affect young people. It is crucial, therefore, that they have opportunities to be meaningfully included in the decision-making spaces where collective solutions are debated, and that they have ways of holding duty bearers to account when they fall short of their promises to instill change.

The research underpinning this report demonstrates how the United Nations is supporting young people to do this at multiple levels of governance across a range of countries, with differing challenges and opportunities. It covers how they are finding innovative ways to engage duty bearers, monitor their actions and contribute to new ideas, behaviors and policy directions. There are numerous insights into how young people are organizing, included, and responded to by those in positions of power. At the heart of these efforts is the strengthening of social accountability relationships between young people and governments, as well as the United Nations, who work with both.

Yet, young people tell us that we can do more, with more of their peers in their full diversity and in ways that are more likely to foster transformative change. Their well-meaning critiques ask us to be radical, to be hard-headed and realistic about what we are achieving, the leverage we possess and the spectrum of possible outcomes in different contexts. Furthermore, as youth-led social movements in many countries demonstrated when the COVID-19 pandemic forced us to largely turn to digital and rethink modes of engagement, young people want us to be nimble and seize windows of opportunity where they arise.

A clear roadmap we have to support in these efforts is “Our Common Agenda” – the United Nations Secretary General’s latest agenda of action that presents concrete proposals for how we can all work together and create a future that’s better for everyone. At the core of its recommendations lies the need to deepen solidarity with the world’s young people; re-building trust and removing obstacles that stand in the way of meaningful intergenerational partnerships.

I hope that those reading this report draw inspiration from it, whilst taking its messages as a chance to reflect on their own work supporting young people to participate in decision-making and to hold governments to account for progress towards the realization of the Sustainable Development Goals. A lot has already been done and much of it is beginning to bear fruit, even under the most trying of circumstances. It’s now time to take stock, listen to what young people say works and what else can be done, and to partner with organizations and governments pushing for change wherever they may be.

Jayathma Wickramanayake
United Nations Secretary General’s Envoy on Youth

Contents

Acknowledgements	2
Foreword	3
Acronyms	5
List of figures	6
List of tables	6
Executive summary	7
Key messages	8
Key recommendations	9
<hr/>
1. Introduction	10
<hr/>
2. Methods	14
2.1. Sampling	14
2.2. Analysis	15
2.3. Limitations	15
<hr/>
3. Study scope	17
3.1. UN Country Team representatives	17
3.2. Government representatives	18
3.3. Youth Groups and Networks	19
<hr/>
4. Key Findings	20
4.1. Enabling environments	20
4.2. Which UN agencies support young people	23
4.3. Who is supported	25
4.4. What is supported	27
4.5. Processes and platforms	29
4.6. Training and tools	31
4.7. Voluntary National Reviews (VNRs)	33
4.8. Feedback	35
<hr/>
5. What works?	36
5.1. What and where outcomes are claimed	37
5.2. Outcomes from UN Country Teams' support	39
<hr/>
6. Recommendations	42
6.1. UN entities' direct support to young people (with)	42
6.2. UN entities' indirect support to young people (for)	43
6.3. Strengthening UN entities	44
6.4. Conclusion	45
<hr/>
Bibliography	46
Annex 1: Details on study participants	46
<hr/>
Resource compendium	47

Acronyms

COVID/COVID-19	Coronavirus Disease 2019
CSO	Civil Society Organization
DCO	Development Coordination Office
ECOSOC	United Nations Economic and Social Council
HLPF	High-Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development
INGO	International Non-Governmental Organization
LGBTQI+	Lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, questioning or queer, intersex, The 'plus' is used to signify all of the gender identities and sexual orientations not specifically covered by the other five initials.
NGO	Non-Governmental Organization
OSGEY	Office of Secretary General's Envoy on Youth
PETS	Public Expenditure Tracking
RCO	UN Resident Coordinator's Office
SDGs	Sustainable Development Goals
UNDP	United Nations Development Programme
UNFPA	United Nations Population Fund
UNICEF	United Nations Children's Fund
UNRWA	United Nations Relief and Works Agency
VNRs	Voluntary National Reviews

List of figures

Figure 3.1:	Agency affiliation of UN Country Team representatives, by country	17
Figure 3.2:	Breakdown of sectors where the UN supports social accountability, by % of respondents	18
Figure 3.3:	Breakdown of sector focus of government representatives, by % of respondents	18
Figure 3.4:	Levels of work for government representatives, by % of respondents	19
Figure 3.5:	Type of youth organization covered, by % of respondents	19
Figure 3.6:	Breakdown of youth group sectoral focus, by % of respondents	19
Figure 4.1:	UN Country Team engagement of young people by region, by % of respondents	21
Figure 4.2:	Government commitments to support SDG-related social accountability, by % of respondents	22
Figure 4.3:	UN Country Team views on levels of government responsiveness, by % of respondents	22
Figure 4.4:	Government's commitments, by % respondents	23
Figure 4.5:	Top 5 UN entities that young people report support them, by # of countries	24
Figure 4.6:	Levels of support for most cited UN entities, by % of respondents	25
Figure 4.7:	Types of youth engaged by UN Country Teams, by # countries	26
Figure 4.8:	UN Country Team supported initiatives, by # of countries	27
Figure 4.9:	Levels of support for initiatives, by % of respondents	28
Figure 4.10:	Support for formal processes and platforms as reported by young people, by % of respondents	29
Figure 4.11:	Breakdown of who else participates in accountability platforms, as reported by young people	29
Figure 4.12:	Levels where platforms take place, as reported by governments, by # of countries	29
Figure 4.13:	Activities young people can participate in as part of accountability platforms, events or processes, as reported by governments, by # of countries	30
Figure 4.14:	Forms of support received by youth networks from the UN in relation to accountability, by # of countries	31
Figure 4.15:	Forms of training provided by the UN to young people, as reported by UN Country Teams, by # of countries	32
Figure 4.16:	Countries where UN Country Team and government respondents reported young people participated in the VNR process	33
Figure 4.17:	Groups of young people who participated in the VNR process, as reported by UN Country Teams and governments	33
Figure 4.18:	Youth participation in VNR processes as reported by young people, UN Country Teams and government representatives	34
Figure 4.19:	Ways governments keep young people up-to-date on the implementation of the SDGs, as reported by governments, by # of countries	35
Figure 4.20:	Young people's experiences being asked to provide feedback on UN support to young people, by % of youth respondents	35
Figure 5.1:	Spectrum of potential social accountability outcomes	37
Figure 5.2:	Levels of outcomes shared by young people, by # of countries	37
Figure 5.3:	Levels at which young people and UN Country Teams claim results, as a % of respondents from each group	38
Figure 5.4:	Sectors where UN Country Team results are claimed, as a % respondents	38
Figure 5.5:	Sectors where youth results are claimed, as a % respondents	39
Figure 6. 1:	Scores given to forms of support for youth and accountability, by UN Country Teams and young people	42
Figure 6.2:	Scores given to forms of support for government and accountability, by government	43

---

List of tables

Table 3.1:	Regional breakdown of 25 survey countries	17
------------	---	----

CREDIT: ActionAid

Executive summary

Young people are central to achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Their voices, energy and creativity are needed to ensure that decisions and policies that affect their lives fulfil the Agenda's promise to tackle the biggest issues facing the world both today and in the future.

This report explores the ways the United Nations (UN) is supporting young people to engage in participatory decision-making processes and to hold duty bearers in their governments to account for the realization of the sustainable development goals (SDGs). It focuses on activities in 37 countries across five UN regions, including deep dives into seven: Kenya, Ghana, Thailand, Albania, Jordan, Pakistan and Guatemala, to showcase stories of successful collaborations, challenges and hopes for the future.

The research uncovered a range of activities and processes supported at different levels of governance by UN entities. Among them are spaces for deliberation and decision-making to which young people are invited by states and international organizations. It also includes ad hoc, created, and increasingly digital opportunities for young people to engage duty bearers, raise issues that are important to them, and nudge agendas in new directions. All these activities have the potential to contribute to what this report terms healthy social accountability relationships.

The report also describes outcomes from the UN's support to young people that cover a broad spectrum. These run from awareness-raising, mobilization and empowerment, to capacity-building, consultation and advocacy, and then to commitments to behavior and policy changes. Each is more or less possible depending on the enabling environments in which UN entities and young people work together. And each is an important step towards transformative change.

The report concludes with recommendations on how UN entities can support young people and strengthen social accountability relationships across different contexts. A spectrum of types of support in different enabling environments is identified. The report's annex includes a list of open-source case studies, tools and other resources that UN entities and young people can use to build their capacity for future engagement.

Key messages

- The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and UN Women were mentioned most frequently by young people as supporting them to engage in social accountability initiatives. Young people are most often supported to work at the sub-national level, followed by the national level. Yet, there were also suggestions from the seven deep dive countries that UN entities often work in silos and their work can overlap.
- Almost all of the surveyed government respondents reported that they involve young people in decision-making processes. Most common were regular opportunities for young people to engage government representatives, followed by helping them access information and securing commitments to youth participation in planning and budgeting processes.
- All 25 UN Country Teams included in this research indicated they support a broad variety of social accountability initiatives. In particular, young people were supported to work on COVID response and recovery, program implementation and policy making. More technically difficult initiatives, such as formal SDG review and follow ups, planning and budgeting, legislative activism, and monitoring and evaluating policies and programs were less supported.
- Over half of young respondents reported being supported by UN entities with training on, or tools for, social accountability. Most common were those related to accessing information, data and evidence, followed by training on rights-based and awareness-raising approaches, and online advocacy. More technical activities, such as public expenditure tracking (PETS) and grievance redress mechanisms were the tools young people were supported with least.
- Grassroots groups, girls and young women, and young people with disabilities were the top three categories of young people supported by both UN Country Teams and governments to engage in social accountability initiatives. However, conversations with young people revealed that the location where UN entities work affects who they support. For example, they argued that 'politically connected' groups in urban areas are the ones supported the most, whilst peripheral and rural young people can be overlooked.
- Outcomes claimed by UN Country Teams were generally related to women and children, and the health and education sectors. This likely reflects the mandates of UNICEF, the UNDP and UN Women. The next most-commonly cited sectors were culture and sport, social protection, and employment and labor.
- There was a general reluctance among UN Country Teams to claim outcomes related to their support for young people to engage in social accountability initiatives. This likely stems from confusion over what should count as a good outcome in different enabling environments, as well as difficulty in identifying attribution and measuring the impact of such work.
- Over half of UN Country Team respondents said that their initiatives were not monitored or evaluated, or that they were not sure if they were. While the majority of young people indicated that they had been asked to provide some form of feedback to UN entities, only about a third said this was for an evaluation of a social accountability-related activity.

Key recommendations

- Reach beyond the usual suspects. Young people felt that UN entities should work harder to support difficult-to-reach and marginalized groups. It was argued that this can be achieved through innovative funding mechanisms and small grants distributed among networks that have a presence among grassroots civil society organizations.
- Raise awareness about and translate the SDGs. Young people suggested that there is a need to raise awareness of the SDGs beyond young people directly engaged by UN entity programs, and to translate their rationales into language they can easily understand, including more succinct measures of progress towards targets.
- Capitalize on what young people are already doing. Some young people argued that they are already part of successful initiatives and efforts to engage duty bearers, and that with UN support they could scale up their activities and have greater impact through training in how to better use evidence to support advocacy.
- Challenge tokenism and follow up. Across the deep dive countries, young people argued that consultations and decision-making platforms could often feel tokenistic. To address this, UN entities must ensure there is follow up after consultations and platforms, and communicate back to young people what has changed or not as a result of their participation.
- Lend credibility and amplify marginalized voices. Youth representatives from deep dive countries urged UN entities to use their position and leverage (often through funding governments directly) to open up spaces for young people who are harder to reach or who governments do not always want to engage with (e.g. LGBTQI+ youth). This was seen as particularly important in places where governments are most comfortable engaging young people who do not challenge them.
- Define social accountability. Further work could help UN Country Teams map out how supported initiatives contribute to social accountability, even in contexts where youth holding duty bearers accountable may be a distant aim. This should also help Country Teams spot instances where participation strays into tokenism – or where windows of opportunity arise for transformative change. UN entities could learn from ‘theory of change’ and participatory monitoring approaches to improve their support for social accountability.
- Set clear, contextually relevant and realistic goals. UN Country Teams should see themselves as catalysts of healthy social accountability relationships. To do this, they must ensure they understand their enabling environments’ challenges and opportunities, and begin their interventions with realistic goals. This will help them to not unduly raise expectations among young people and duty bearers.

CREDIT: ActionAid

1. Introduction

The UN recognizes that the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development will not be achieved without the voices, creativity and participation of young people in decisions that affect their lives.<sup>1</sup> Moreover, its Youth Strategy argues that ‘young people’s empowerment, development and engagement is an end in itself, as well as a means to build a better world’.<sup>2</sup> These simple truths are crucial for a world facing a host of challenges that span borders and threaten the futures of 1.8 billion young people, around 90% of whom live in developing countries.<sup>3</sup>

This report uses new research to explore ways the UN is supporting young people to engage in participatory decision-making processes and to hold duty bearers in their governments to account for the realization of the sustainable development goals. It focuses on activities from 30 countries across five UN regions, and deep dives into seven: Kenya, Ghana, Thailand, Albania, Jordan, Pakistan and Guatemala, to showcase stories of successful collaborations, challenges and hopes for the future. It concludes with recommendations from young people, UN entities and government representatives.

Throughout the report, attention is paid to relationships between UN entities, youth groups, organizations and networks, and governments; referred to as the ‘accountability triad’ (see box: Accountability relationships). The focus is on both the formal and informal ways in which these relationships can be strengthened and sustained to ensure young people’s voices are amplified, and that advocacy leads to change. The report has adopted a broad definition of what constitutes an outcome, because survey and interview respondents differed in their definition of ‘outcomes’. This has meant that the report has been able to capture the spectrum of enabling environments, opportunities and success stories across the studied countries.

1. <https://sdgs.un.org/2030agenda>

2. <https://www.unyouth2030.com/>

3. This report follows the Youth Strategy, in the most part, which considers the broad range of definitions used by UN entities for what age groups can be considered ‘youth’, whilst recognising that the UN Secretariat usually gives a bracket of 15-24 years old. Throughout, the terms ‘youth’ and ‘young person/people’ are also used interchangeably to acknowledge the diverse spectrum of young people (race, gender, class, caste, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation and gender identity).

Accountability Relationships

The data gathered for this report unpicks key relationships between a social accountability 'triad' composed of UN entities, the young people they support, and duty bearers in governments.

Social accountability 'emerges from actions by citizens and civil society organizations aimed at holding the state to account, as well as efforts by government and other actors (media, private sector, donors) to support these actions' (UNDP, 2010).<sup>4</sup> It is an ongoing process through which trust is built between citizens and states, and through which people can raise their voices. Healthy social accountability relationships lead to more inclusive and better policies, and provide citizens with ways of sanctioning non-performing duty bearers. In most cases, therefore, they require a minimum of cooperation among the actors in the triad.

As highlighted in its Youth Strategy, UN entities can play a role as partners to young people and brokers of social accountability relationships. They can help youth groups, organizations and networks to engage bureaucrats, state officials and elected politicians responsible for ensuring progress towards the SDGs.

To do this they use a variety of techniques, from raising awareness of important issues and helping young people to organize, to building their capacity to gather evidence, conduct advocacy and run campaigns. They can also create opportunities for young people and duty bearers to meet. This support can involve funding, but this is not always necessary or best – and in some situations UN entities are better working at arm's length. Indeed, the ownership of the triad's accountability relationships directly affect their sustainability and potential for transformative change.<sup>5</sup>

This report's findings cover a broad range of activities and processes. Among them are spaces for deliberation and decision-making to which young people are invited by states and international organizations. Here, the groups often debate progress towards the SDGs and future policies with the use of evidence and cutting-edge technical advice. The report also includes examples of ad hoc, created, and increasingly digital opportunities for young people to engage duty bearers, raise issues that are important to them and nudge agendas in new directions. Whatever the venue or medium, the report seeks to understand the role UN entities play before, during and after engagements, and what has been done for and with young people. Where possible, it also provides perspectives from two or more triad members.

In places, the report seeks a dialogue with themes identified by the 2020 Believe in Better working paper jointly published by the Office of the Secretary General's Envoy on Youth, ActionAid, Restless Development and the Major Group for Children and Youth.<sup>6</sup> It examined opportunities for young people to engage in SDG-related accountability processes, and urged triad actors to create participatory spaces. Attention was drawn to a number of themes including: meaningful

4. https://www.undp.org/content/dam/undp/library/Democratic Governance/OGC/dg-ogc-Fostering Social Accountability-Guidance Note.pdf

5. Arising from critical gender theorists, transformative change seeks to challenge the power dynamics underpinning pressing social issues rather than only addressing their effects.

6. <https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/Believe-in-Better.pdf>

participation that accounts for the challenges of intergenerational engagements and collaborations; the need to update notions of inclusion with an intersectional lens to fully realize promises to leave no one behind; and further efforts to capitalize on translocal-local spaces and practices that allow young people to challenge and overcome physical and structural divides.<sup>7,8</sup>

Believe in Better also laid down the principles of meaningful youth engagement:<sup>9</sup> institutionally mandated, rights-based, safe, designated, resourced, transparent, accessible, voluntary, informative, with reciprocal accountability and due consideration for diversity and inclusion. This report takes these principles as its starting point for analyzing uncovered activities and processes involving young people and UN entities. However, it goes further through its use of research instruments designed to understand the quality and nature of youth participation in decision-making around the SDGs. The development of these research instruments drew inspiration from Arnstein’s (1969) much-cited ‘ladder of citizen participation’ that is used to understand empowerment (see box: Participation).

Participation

The participation ladder can help analysts understand the nature and quality of participation. Each rung of the ladder seeks to describe the extent of people’s power to contribute to and shape the processes they are involved in.

At the lower end of the ladder are those activities that are better thought of as substitutes for real participation, such as when programs aim to educate people with little scope for feedback loops that adjust the curriculum or introduce new topics. These are often labelled as tokenistic by skeptical participants. At the top are processes within which participants are in the lead and control every stage of an engagement – from planning to implementation and evaluation – and power shared or delegated to them by others.

The participation ladder is an oversimplification of what engagements between young people and duty bearers look like in real life. Moreover, it does not capture the way activities, processes and platforms can move up and down the ladder depending on the wider enabling environment and the actions of those involved.

Yet, the ladder helps to remind analysts that participation cannot always be taken at face value. Instead, the experiences and perspectives of the ‘not so powerful’ must be revealed. The ladder can also be helpful to those supporting young people to engage with duty bearers (such as UN entities) in that it helps them to have a critical eye on the nature of those engagements, and provides a guide for what more meaningful participation might look like.

7. <https://www.undp.org/content/undp/en/home/librarypage/poverty-reduction/what-does-it-mean-to-leave-no-one-behind-.html>

8. A theme identified in the Believe in Better report, ‘translocal’ focuses attention on the socio-spatial dynamics and processes of identity formation that transcend boundaries (in particular the nation state), and highlights the significance of networked places, where mobility and circulations of ideas, symbols and knowledge are created and re-created, often from one locality to another.

9. Believe in Better working paper, ActionAid p5

This report begins broadly with descriptions of who is doing what across the studied countries, before narrowing down to specific formal and informal participatory processes. Along the way, the techniques and tools young people use in their engagements with duty bearers are overviewed. Particular attention is given to Voluntary National Review (VNR) processes as a UN-endorsed mechanism through which young people can provide feedback on governments' progress towards the SDGs, and to the translocal, digital and informal spaces through which young people are collaborating, raising their voices, and engaging duty bearers.<sup>10</sup> Focus is also given to who participates in such spaces and how, and the barriers to those who often struggle to be included.

The findings draw out what respondents reported to be good ways of supporting young people in decision-making processes and to hold duty bearers to account. They also look at examples of activities and processes that have not met participants' expectations. Analysis of major trends across the countries are compared with and illustrated by case studies and voices from the seven deep dive countries. It is important to acknowledge that the two do not always agree with one another, and the evidence is sometimes contradictory. Furthermore, the research was not intended to be statistically significant or representative. Instead, the findings add to an emerging picture of what UN entities are doing and how young people are engaging their governments with their support.

The report concludes with recommendations on how UN entities can support young people and strengthen relationships across different contexts. A spectrum of types of support in different enabling environments is identified. The report's annex includes a list of open-source case studies, tools and other resources that UN entities and young people can use to build capacity for future engagements.

---

10. <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/vnrs/>

CREDIT: ActionAid

2. Methods

This review adopted a mixed methods approach to data gathering, composed of quantitative web-based surveys, and qualitative key informant interviews and focus group discussions. These approaches were implemented in parallel from July to September 2021.

2.1 Sampling

Country selection

Countries were selected to participate in this review based on the following guiding principles:

1. Prioritization of countries scoring highly in the areas of youth, SDGs and social accountability, based on the 2020 results against the Youth2030 Scorecard; a self-reporting strategic planning, performance measurement and accountability tool for recording joint action by UN Country Teams.<sup>11, 12</sup>
2. Proportionate allocation by region, taking into account the five regions of Development Coordination Office distribution of the 130 UN Country Teams.<sup>13</sup>
3. Feasibility of implementation, taking into account active conflict or other factors that may impede or enhance the team's ability to gather data in the period required.
4. Within-region variation, including geographic, linguist and other factors.
5. Prioritization of the Youth2030 Fast Track countries, where additional countries must be added or removed to meet a regional target.

11. <https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2020/11/Youth-2030-UNCT-Scorecard.pdf>

12. The Scorecard's indicators span both i) working for youth and ii) working with youth. It captures working with youth at the UN Country Team level through a set of practical measures, drawing from well-laid down principles of meaningful youth engagement (see introduction).

13. These regions included: Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, Asia Pacific, Europe and Central Asia, Arab States.

In total, 37 countries were selected to participate in this research based on the above criteria. A full breakdown of these countries is provided in the annex.

Quantitative surveys

Surveys were intended to provide a quantitative overview of existing practices, models and priorities related to young people and social accountability across countries and stakeholder groups. They were implemented using a web-based platform, and shared with stakeholders in all 37 selected countries. Surveys were based on common themes and tailored to each of the three stakeholder groups (youth group members, government representatives and UN Country Team members), ensuring appropriateness for each group while allowing for comparison of key questions across surveys. These themes included accountability context, participation, platforms, engagement, outcomes and future support.

Young people and government representatives were accessed through existing networks of UN Country Teams, ActionAid and the research team. They were invited to participate in the survey based on their previous involvement in UN activities or their known role in promoting youth engagement and social accountability. Resident Coordinator's Offices(RCO) in each country, or a nominated focal point within UN entities, identified appropriate survey respondents from UN entities engaged with young people.

Qualitative data collection

To gain a deeper insight into the UN's support to the triad's relationships, qualitative data was gathered remotely from seven deep dive countries selected from the 37 surveyed countries. In each country, one 4-8 person focus group discussion with young people and UN Country Team representatives was carried out, lasting between 1.5 and 2 hours. This was complemented by 1-3 key informant interviews carried out in each country with government representatives, lasting between 30 and 60 minutes. Following these discussions, participants commonly shared additional insights, resources and tools with the review team over email, providing additional context and detail for this review.

2.2 Analysis

Survey data was analyzed to identify key trends within each respondent group. Where possible, secondary coding was conducted to establish a country-level score for relevant questions, based on a binary yes/no categorization. Quantitative datasets for each of the three respondent groups were analyzed independently. Where possible, questions were analyzed to support triangulation and comparison between datasets.

Qualitative data gathered through the focus groups and key informant interviews, as well as through open response survey questions, was analyzed thematically based on a pre-established thematic framework that drew from the participation ladder and the Believe in Better report discussed in the introduction. Once initial analysis was complete, quantitative and qualitative findings were analyzed iteratively to maximize the extent to which both datasets complemented each other.

2.3 Limitations

As with all data gathering activities, this review includes a number of limitations. These limitations, along with steps taken to address them, where possible, are described briefly below.

Firstly, due to the nature of the activity and time available to conduct the data collection, participants were accessed primarily through UN Country Team networks and/or facilitated by UN Country Team staff. While this provided useful entry points into youth and government respondent groups that would not have been possible to access otherwise, this approach to sampling means that findings from this survey may not be representative of all youth groups or government actors in any given country. Rather, these findings provide indications of possible trends related to similar groups and contexts.

Secondly, survey participants from all three stakeholder groups were asked to complete questionnaires on behalf of their agency/group's activities as a whole, rather than based on their individual experiences or views. While many stakeholders took steps to gather information from colleagues to ensure the accuracy of their responses, it is possible that not all respondents were perfectly aware of the activities carried out by their agency or group at the time of the survey. This is particularly true for UN Country Team and government respondent groups, given frequent staff transfer. As such, findings should be interpreted as a snapshot of on-going and recent activity rather than a historical account of engagement and support to young people.

Third, the relatively uneven response rates across stakeholders and countries meant it was not always possible to carry out country-level data comparison across stakeholder groups. However, removing countries with responses from fewer than two stakeholder groups from the data set (see details in next section) did help to ensure that findings presented in the review were as comparable as possible.

Additionally, implementing surveys using web-based forms meant that the survey population is limited to those individuals with access to the internet. While this limitation was unavoidable due to other study constraints, it does mean that the views of individuals without this form of access are likely not reflected in this study. However, research team members did engage with stakeholders on the topic of access to the internet as it relates to inclusion, ensuring that this access barrier is discussed in the review.

Lastly, though the survey tools were available in English, Spanish, French and Arabic, it was not feasible to translate them into all the languages used by survey participants. This may have resulted in some individuals opting not to complete the surveys, or others doing so in a language they were not fully comfortable with. Where requested, the review team collaborated with UN Country Team translators to ensure the survey could be implemented in additional languages. All qualitative data collection was carried out in the participant's language of preference.

3. Study Scope

The survey was shared with individuals from 37 countries. Overall, a total of 433 individuals from 35 countries participated in the survey. In an effort to ensure responses from each survey could be analyzed jointly, countries where only one of the three 'triad' members (UN Country Team, government, youth networks) responded were excluded. Therefore, in total, responses covering 25 countries were used for this review. Across these 25 countries, a total of 105 UN Country Team representatives, 99 government representatives and 229 youth network representatives participated in the survey.<sup>14</sup>

Table 3.1: Regional breakdown of 25 survey countries

Africa	Asia Pacific	Europe and Central Asia	Latin America and Caribbean	Arab States
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Cameroon</li> <li>• Ghana</li> <li>• Kenya</li> <li>• Rwanda</li> <li>• Somalia</li> <li>• Togo</li> <li>• Zimbabwe</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Cambodia</li> <li>• India</li> <li>• Lao PDR</li> <li>• Pakistan</li> <li>• Thailand</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Albania</li> <li>• Kosovo</li> <li>• North Macedonia</li> <li>• Serbia</li> <li>• Uzbekistan</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Brazil</li> <li>• Costa Rica</li> <li>• Dominican Republic</li> <li>• Guatemala</li> <li>• Ecuador</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Iraq</li> <li>• Jordan</li> <li>• Morocco</li> </ul>

3.1 UN Country Team representatives

Overall, 105 UN Country Team representatives participated in the survey from the 25 countries. An overview of survey participants by agency is presented below.

Figure 3.1: Agency affiliation of UN Country Team representatives, by country

The category of 'other UN' includes a wide variety of UN entities, including the IOM, UNHCR, UNAIDS, UN Habitat, UNRWA, and others who had only one respondent.

14. As participants were asked to provide responses on behalf of their agency, entity or network, data is not intended to present individuals' perspectives and is therefore not gender disaggregated.

UN Country Team representatives most commonly described themselves as working on youth issues, followed by women and children and social protection/volunteering. The least common responses related to agriculture, and technology and innovation.

Figure 3.2: Breakdown of sectors where the UN supports social accountability, by % of respondents

3.2 Government representatives

A total of 99 government representatives participated in the survey across 19 of the 25 countries.

Figure 3.3: Breakdown of sector focus of government representatives, by % of respondents

Of these representatives, the majority described themselves as working at the national level (86.8%), followed by sub-national and then transnational/international levels.

Figure 3.4: Levels of work for government representatives, by % of respondents

3.3 Youth groups and networks

In total, 229 representatives of youth groups or networks took the survey from the 25 countries analyzed in this report. They classified themselves approximately equally representing youth groups or networks that are youth-led, focused solely on youth issues or focused on multiple sectors.

Figure 3.5: Type of youth organization covered, by % of respondents

With regards to what they worked on, youth respondents most commonly noted that their group focused on education, followed by social protection, and women and children's issues more generally.

Figure 3.6: Breakdown of youth group sectoral focus, by % of respondents

CREDIT: ActionAid

4. Key findings

This section begins with broad descriptions of what triad members are doing to support youth participation in decision-making, and to hold governments accountable for progress towards the SDGs. It then narrows down to focus on specific formal and informal participatory processes, and the techniques and tools young people are supported to use in their engagements with duty bearers. Who participates in such spaces and how, and who struggles to be included, is also explored.

Analysis of major trends are compared with and illustrated by case studies and voices from the deep dive countries. The narrative draws out what respondents reported to be effective ways of supporting young people. It also delves into examples of activities and processes that have not met participants' expectations. In order to protect respondents' identities, the analysis is kept descriptive and only rarely delves to the country level. Names and organizations are also omitted.

4.1 Enabling environments

The enabling environment for social accountability initiatives in part, but never completely, determines what kind of initiatives it is possible to support and types of change they can aim for. Indeed, social accountability relationships can be conceptualized as requiring both a willing and able government, and interested and active citizens.

For example, in country X, governments may provide information on decision-making and development outcomes in a manner easily digestible for non-experts; and citizens may demand it and have the skills to use it to conduct advocacy. In contrast, in country Y, the government may make decisions behind closed doors and actively spread false information about progress towards professed policy goals; while citizens may have given up on engaging unresponsive duty bearers and lack the skills to use any evidence in advocacy efforts.

All members of the triad can play a role in creating an enabling environment for social accountability processes and relationships. While governments often commit to regular opportunities to be engaged by young people, the UN recognizes that it can be a partner to young people and broker of relationships between them and governments. It can also advocate for more transparency around governance processes related to the SDGs, and encourage governments to be more responsive when engaged by young people.

Overall, roughly three quarters or more of survey respondents from UN Country Teams reported engaging young people in social accountability processes across all the surveyed regions. This was highest in Europe and Central Asia, and lowest in Latin America and the Caribbean (see Figure 4.1).

Figure 4.1: UN Country Team engagement of young people by region, by % of respondents

Youth representatives in 24 of the 25 countries reported that they are engaged in social accountability processes supported by the UN. However, only 63% said the UN supported this engagement, and 29.5% said they did not know if the UN supported them or not. These findings may point to a lack of a shared definition of what social accountability means across contexts and among the triad members (see box: Considering the 'social accountability' label).

Considering the 'social accountability' label

The term 'social accountability' is increasingly used to describe efforts to empower citizens to engage duty bearers in government and, sometimes, beyond. It arguably has its roots in literature describing civil society activism that enables citizens to sanction poorly performing duty bearers. For many academics, the key illustrative example comes from Mexico's deepening democracy over the 1990-2000s (Fox, 2008).

Our conversations with members of the triad in the seven deep dive countries often revealed different understandings of the concept of social accountability. For example, many suggested consultations and participation in decision-making were social accountability. This should not be seen as a case of misunderstanding, as these activities are necessary parts of healthy social accountability relationships. However they are not sufficient, as there are many situations in which consulted citizens have little ability to hold duty bearers to account; or where they cannot follow up to ensure agreements are kept.

This suggests a need to consider whether UN-supported 'social accountability' activities are strengthening relationships in ways that will lead to responsive duty bearers and create opportunities to sanction poor governance or broken promises. This may be thought of as ensuring that 'accountability' mechanisms are accorded as much attention as citizens' 'social' opportunities to engage duty bearers. Although, this is arguably the harder part of social accountability in many contexts.

Governments have a number of ways in which they create favorable enabling environments for youth participation in social accountability initiatives. Encouragingly, almost all (94.3%) of the surveyed government respondents reported that they involve young people in decision-making processes. They most commonly reported providing regular opportunities for young people to engage government representatives, followed by rights to access information, and commitments to young people’s participation in planning and budgeting processes (see Figure 4.2). Funding for youth groups, regular reporting on progress towards the SDGs, and commitments to budget transparency were the least reported ways government respondents said they support young people.

These findings suggest that, although governments are happy for young people to engage them and participate in some governance processes, they may be less willing to provide them with the information they would need to hold them to account.

Figure 4.2: Breakdown of sector focus of government representatives, by % of respondents

The findings should also be viewed against how responsive UN Country Teams judged governments to be, to engagements by young people (Figure 4.3). Governments of countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, Africa and the Arab States were believed to have the least responsive duty bearers. In contrast, governments in Asia Pacific, Europe and Central Asia were judged to be the most responsive.

Figure 4.3: UN Country Team views on levels of government responsiveness, by % of respondents

Social accountability theorists suggest that young people with more access to information will be better equipped to elicit responses from the government and hold them to account. It is notable, therefore, that UN Country Team respondents from Asia Pacific, Europe and Central Asia judge the governments they engage with to be most committed to access and rights to information, and to offering regular opportunities for young people to engage them on progress towards the SDGs. In contrast, access and rights to information is believed to be less of a commitment in Africa and the Arab States, where governments are judged to be relatively unresponsive.

Figure 4.4: Government’s commitments, by % of UNCT respondents

The generally high level of UN Country Team support to social accountability processes, despite the differing challenges across regions, suggests that UN entities believe such activities are worthwhile and that they perceive opportunities for change. Interviewed UN entities saw themselves as supporting a spectrum of carefully targeted activities with the potential to cultivate and strengthen relationships between the triad’s three actors, regardless of the limitations of the enabling environment. This is a theme that is returned to throughout the report.

4.2 Which UN entities support young people

Youth respondents were asked which UN entities support their groups and networks to engage governments (see Figure 4.5). The UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA and UN Women were mentioned most frequently across the 25 countries. This reflects UNDP and UNFPA’s broad mandates, and UNICEF and UN Women’s respective focus on children, young people and women.

Figure 4.5: Top 5 UN entities that young people report support them, by # of countries

UNDP, UNICEF and UNFPA were all mentioned as supporting young people to engage governments across 11 countries: Cambodia, Cameroon, Ecuador, Ghana, India, Jordan, Lao PDR, Morocco, Pakistan, Thailand and Zimbabwe. Yet, this figure masks exactly how active different UN entities are at the country level. For example, UNFPA was consistently mentioned as the lead agency working to support young people in Albania, even though it collaborates with UNICEF, UNDP and others. However, there were also suggestions that UN entities often work in silos, sometimes not communicating with one another or with youth partners about their programs (see box: Collaboration(s)).

Collaboration(s)

Ongoing reforms of the United Nations development system have sought to strengthen UN entities' ability to cooperate, coordinate and collaborate among themselves and with young people and governments worldwide. At country level, the United Nations Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework is the most important instrument for these ambitions.<sup>15</sup> It ensures that UN entities' work is rooted in four key principles: to clearly articulate the United Nation's collective response to help countries meet the SDGs; to embody the spirit of partnerships with local actors and governments; to help turn promises to leave no one behind into reality; and to provide UN country teams with the tools to tailor responses to countries' specific needs and realities.

UNICEF's Generation Unlimited platform was cited by interviewees as a valued approach to addressing issues of coordination and integration. In Kenya and Jordan, youth groups and government representatives emphasized the importance of a 'one stop shop' for youth engagement, which Generation Unlimited was helping to provide. In Jordan, the platform brings together young people with the government and thematic experts to produce policy papers and recommendations, which are shared on live TV. In Kenya, it brings together youth-serving organizations, government representatives and UN entities with the aim of coordinating and integrating all youth-related interventions. One of the outcomes of this is a multi-sector partnership that will see more than 30 million young Kenyans in education, training or employment by 2030.

In Guatemala, youth organizations explained that the UN plays a unique role in promoting social accountability. Here, a number of UN entities work together to establish bridging relationships between young people and government, which creates the political space for young people to have meaningful engagement with governments where accountability relationships can be established. This was cited as particularly important for marginalized groups such as indigenous youth and young people with disabilities. Equally, UN entities strengthen the role of young people in these relationships by building relations between groups that are not always networked or organized. Organizations working on these issues also cited data generated by UN entities related to the SDGs as an important tool that they use to hold the government to account.

15. <https://unsdg.un.org/2030-agenda/cooperation-framework>

Of the four most frequently mentioned UN entities, young people indicated they most often support them to work at the sub-national level, followed by the national level (see Figure 4.6). While trends are similar across UN entities, UNICEF appears to work most at the sub-national level, closely followed by UN Women and UNDP. This may be because duty bearers are more accessible below the national levels, and UN entities are better able to play a brokering role where their regular programs and activities take place. However, social accountability initiatives can benefit from working across levels, so relationships and impacts can be scaled (see box: Bridging local and national engagement).

Figure 4.6: Levels of support for most cited UN entities, by % of respondents

Bridging local and national engagement

Pakistan provided a good example of working at multiple levels (federal, provincial and district). There, UNDP deployed SDG teams to support planning and reporting. This has led to the identification of priority areas for young people, recommendations and newly-designed interventions. Quantitative and qualitative data to inform the priorities was collected from across the country by the government with UNDP’s support. They consulted young people, youth organizations and community groups, as well as policymakers, academia and development partners. This has led to youth groups working with the government to pilot a district-level framework for the SDGs, and an SDG scorecard. The tools used to generate the data are a district-level Youth Development Index, Digital Youth Survey, National Youth Pulse and a community of best practice.<sup>16</sup>

4.3 Who is supported

UN Country Teams and governments were asked which types of young people they regularly engage in social accountability processes and decision-making. Grassroots groups, girls and young women, and young people with disabilities were the top three groups engaged by both UN Country Teams and government representatives. Overall, UN Country Teams reported engaging a more diverse range of young people in social accountability processes than government stakeholders (see Figure 4.7). Although, the differences may reflect government representatives’ lack of knowledge about what other ministries and departments are doing.

16. Please contact UNDP Pakistan for access to these tools.

Figure 4.7: Types of young people engaged by UN Country Teams, by # countries<sup>17</sup>

These results suggest UN Country Teams are working to ensure they are leaving no one behind. They may also suggest logistical challenges and political factors that determine who can be engaged by who. These were raised by respondents from the deep dive countries (see box: Capitals, connections and education).

Capitals, connections and education

Conversations with respondents from the deep dive countries covered how the location of UN entities' work affects who they are able to support. For example, young people often argued that 'politically connected' groups in urban areas with the capacity to officially register their organizations with governments are the ones supported by the UN. This means that those in peripheral, often rural, locations and unable to register – for reasons from capacity to the nature of the issue they focus on – can be overlooked. As one youth representative put it:

"It is unbelievable that the partnerships between INGOs and specifically UN entities are always with royal NGOs in Jordan. These royal institutions will compete with youth organizations, especially when they apply for permissions. For example, when we as youth try to apply for permission from the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation, if a royal organization is applying too, they will not look at my application for permission."

Young refugees were one of the groups engaged least by surveyed UN Country Teams and government representatives, which may again reflect the relatively few humanitarian contexts in which surveys were implemented. It may also point to the difficulty of supporting non-citizens to engage in social accountability processes.<sup>18</sup> This speaks to the challenge of engaging young people who are not accorded the same rights as others and those who are, or may wish to remain, unseen by authorities (see box: Inclusive innovations).

17. These questions were asked slightly differently to UN Country Team and to government respondents. UN Country Team representatives were asked about groups of youth engaged in 'social accountability processes', while government reps were asked about groups of youth engaged in 'decision-making processes'.

18. In certain contexts (e.g. Jordan), young refugees are engaged very specifically by a bespoke UN agency such as UNRWA. In other contexts, young refugees are engaged most often by UNHCR.

Inclusive innovations

UN entities are striving to overcome barriers to inclusion in the places they work. As with the UNFPA in Albania, this is often done by working with and providing funds to youth networks with physical links to difficult-to-reach groups, and to those able to fulfil the reporting roles for those less capable. It was argued that such networks can organize and accompany marginalized young people in government-invited spaces, and ensure they are given seats on bodies such as youth councils or school committees. This can also begin to address intersectional barriers to participation and to move beyond ‘the usual suspects’ engaged by governments.

Spaces specifically designed for marginalized young people can be another way to ensure that their voices are heard. In Kenya, the Pastoralist Youth Summit has created such opportunities for 200 young people from pastoralist communities who face challenges such as unemployment, poor education, radicalization and poor leadership. The Summit provides a platform for young people from pastoralist counties of Kenya to share challenges and develop effective strategies with government representatives.

4.4 What is supported

UN Country Team respondents were asked what broad types of social accountability initiatives they support. Nineteen suggested they were supporting young people across all types of initiatives (see Figure 4.8). As an indication of the responsiveness of UN Country Teams, COVID response and recovery and program implementation were supported in all 25 countries, and policy-making in 24. It was notable, however, that more technically difficult initiatives, such as formal SDG review and follow ups, planning and budgeting, legislative activism and monitoring and evaluating policies and programs, were less supported.

Figure 4.8: Types of young people engaged by UN Country Teams, by # countries<sup>17</sup>

Across all initiatives, UN Country Team respondents most commonly provide support at the national level, followed by the local and community level and then the sub-national (see Figure 4.9). Twenty-three of the 25 countries also noted that they had moved to online engagements following COVID-19 (see box: Moving online: COVID and convenience). Moreover, four UN Country Teams reported that all eight categories of social accountability initiatives occur online. This suggests that, for some, the move to digital has not limited the scope of their work.

Figure 4.9: Levels of support for initiatives, by % of respondents

Moving online: COVID and convenience

Respondents from the deep dive countries suggested that the COVID-19 pandemic has changed the nature of engagement, with a lot of activity moving to online spaces.

In Kenya, youth groups described online platforms as convenient and efficient and a way to engage large numbers of young people. However, they cautioned that face-to-face engagement is still very important as it is livelier and forces government representatives to respond more; “the government feels uncomfortable, but they tend to listen.”

In Albania, UNICEF is supporting an international NGO to facilitate the uptake of U-Report; an online initiative that aims to digitally insert young people’s voices into policy-making processes by providing a platform for the triad actors to engage one another.<sup>19</sup> The INGO is currently undertaking an information campaign in secondary schools to introduce teachers and students to the way it works and the way it can strengthen social accountability relationships.

In Guatemala, UNDP worked with 15 youth networks to implement a survey with 2,000 young people to understand their views on conflict drivers and security challenges stemming from COVID-19. This virtual exercise, carried out in 2020, allowed young people to share their experiences in a new way and bridged the gap between young people and policy-makers at the height of the pandemic. Data was analyzed by youth groups, who developed anti-conflict plans and advocacy messages on youth priorities. UNDP facilitated meetings of youth representatives with the offices of the Prosecutor and the Human Rights Ombudsman, who have responded to a number of issues raised with concrete plans.

Some UN Country Team and youth representatives were concerned, however, about implications of a move to digital support and digital engagement. This included concerns that those without access (due to a lack of infrastructure or money) or ICT skills may be left behind. For others, digital spaces raised new safeguarding implications and possibly required revisiting ‘do no harm’ principles, developed in previous eras when online engagements were relatively uncommon.

19. <https://www.unicef.org/innovation/U-Report>

4.5 Processes and platforms

The Believe in Better working paper identified the importance of formal processes and spaces such as platforms at different levels of governance for young people to engage duty bearers. Almost three quarters of the surveyed youth respondents reported that their groups were supported by the UN to take part in regular governance processes, or to attend events or platforms where young people can hold the government to account (see Figure 4.10).

Figure 4.10: Support for formal processes and platforms as reported by young people, by % of respondents

According to young people, civil society or community groups were the most common types of participants in the processes and platforms they took part in, followed by state bureaucrats and officials, and the media (see Figure 4.11). This may suggest that some of these platforms were mainly venues for civil society networking, awareness-raising and planning.

Figure 4.11: Breakdown of who else participates in accountability platforms, as reported by young people

Government representatives in 15 countries, covering all five regions, reported supporting major processes, events or platforms where young people have regular opportunities to participate (see Figure 4.12). With the exception of the transnational, there was a roughly even spread among the levels at which they did so (see box: Transnational platforms).

Figure 4.12: Levels where platforms take place, as reported by governments, by # of countries

Transnational platforms

A Ghanaian youth representative recounted an opportunity to attend a regional platform focused on family planning and condom use in Rwanda. Supported by the UNFPA, young participants from ten African countries discussed applying for Global Fund grants in 2020 with representatives of their governments. By the end of the trip, the Ghanaian government representatives had committed to include Condom Programming into the country's proposal. The youth activist argued that the competition created by the presence of representatives from other countries helped secure this.

Government representatives in all 15 countries reported that young people could engage in development planning and program implementation as part of their participation in the supported processes or platforms (see Figure 4.13). This was closely followed by opportunities to meet with political duty bearers. The perhaps more technically difficult and resource-intensive Universal Periodic Reviews (government-led processes examining human rights) and participatory budgeting were only available for young people to participate in in six and nine countries respectively.

Figure 4.13: Activities young people can participate in as part of accountability platforms, events or processes, as reported by governments, by # of countries

Government representatives also shared how the UN supports them to run processes and platforms. In eight of the 15 countries, the UN supports both young people's participation and opportunities for them to engage. In the remainder, there was a mixture of support to young people or government. This suggests that, in many cases, UN entities and governments work side-by-side to provide opportunities for young people to participate in processes and platforms (see box: Working behind the scenes).

Working behind the scenes

In Kenya, UNFPA supports the State Department of Youth Affairs to hold Kikao meetings in conjunction with 25 youth partners to reach out to the most vulnerable in society. The aim of these platforms is to accelerate SDG implementation at the county level. Youth participants from every county have used these platforms to participate in budget setting. However, they are sometimes also able to use the spaces as a way to “sneak” in questions about more controversial issues in ways that the government finds less confrontational. Such opportunities present themselves for young people because they are seen as a government initiative rather than a UNFPA initiative. Identified priorities are then taken up by Youth Engagement Sector Working Groups, which monitor outcomes and progress against any agreed targets.

4.6 Training and tools

Social accountability initiatives use a variety of skills and tools to generate information on the performance of duty bearers that can be used in engagements and to hold them to account. They include on- and off- line advocacy, the use of media, legal activism, participatory monitoring, data and budget analyses. Each requires people to be aware of their rights, varying levels of technical ability and a minimum level of transparency and cooperation by governments.

Overall, 63.5% of young respondents have been supported by UN entities with such training or tools. Roughly half reported that the most common form of support they received related to accessing information, data and evidence, followed by training on rights-based and awareness-raising approaches, and online advocacy (see Figure 14.4). The least commonly mentioned training type was art-based activism. Across countries, young people in Pakistan noted receiving training on the greatest number of topics (11), followed by Lao PDR and Cambodia (10).

Figure 4.14: Forms of support received by youth networks from the UN in relation to accountability, by # of countries

What's being used?

As part of the surveys, respondents were asked to provide examples of guidance, training and tools that had informed their social accountability initiatives. A search of UN databases was also conducted for similar materials and case studies of their use. The results revealed a variety of initiatives across the studied countries.

Almost all the sources provided and found through the search are in English. Most are reports or case studies, but there are quite a number of examples of tools provided by UN Country Teams and youth organizations that are being used on initiatives around the countries surveyed. Most of the sources are from Africa and Asia, or are sources with a global perspective. There is a large number of sources from Kenya.

Of the 25 surveyed UN Country Teams, representatives in four countries – Jordan, Morocco, Rwanda and Thailand – reported training young people on at least 10 forms of social accountability initiatives. The highest proportion reported training in online advocacy and rights-based approaches, followed by offline advocacy (see Figure 4.15). The fewest reported training young people on grievance redress mechanisms. These findings suggest that more technical activities, such as PETS and those that require government involvement such as grievance redress mechanisms, are the least supported.

Figure 4.15: Forms of training provided by the UN to young people, as reported by UN Country Teams, by # of countries

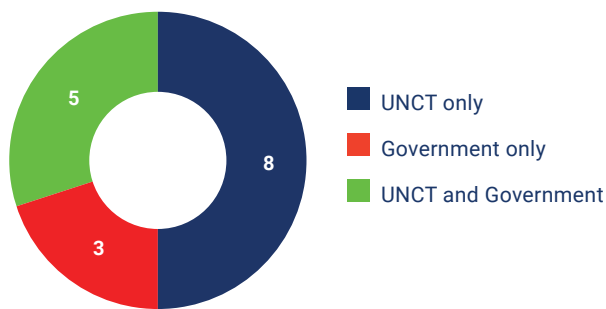

Seventy percent of all training provided by UN Country Teams was given at the national level, with 69.2% of respondents who had reported that grievance redress training was a form of support, saying this occurred at the local/community level. Additionally, 72.9% of respondents who supported online training said this occurred online; and equal proportions of respondents who supported PETS training said this occurred at the national level (54.5%) and at the local/community level (54.5%). This likely reflects where opportunities for social accountability are found and budgets are held within the surveyed countries.

4.7 Voluntary National Reviews (VNRs)

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development encourages member states to conduct regular and inclusive VNRs of progress at the national and sub-national levels. They are designed to be country-led and to involve multiple stakeholders. They also provide opportunities for the sharing of experiences, including successes, challenges and lessons learned.

Of the 25 surveyed countries, respondents in 18 noted that young people had participated in the most recent VNR (see Figure 4.16).<sup>20</sup> However, there was not always agreement between surveyed stakeholders in these countries. For example, in three countries the government noted young people participated in the most recent VNR when the UN Country Team did not, and in eight countries the UN Country Team noted young people participated when the government did not. This may be due to divergent levels of exposure to, or understanding of, VNRs.

Figure 4.16: Countries where UN Country Teams and government respondents reported young people participated in the VNR process

UN Country Teams and government representatives were asked which type of young people are included in VNR processes (see Figure 4.17). Both groups most commonly cited girls and young women as having participated, followed by young people with disabilities and grassroots groups. Young people in conflict-affected areas, migrants and refugees were those least cited. This likely reflects a concerted effort to include young people commonly considered to be marginalized, and the challenges of engaging those in humanitarian crises and considered to be stateless.

Figure 4.17: Groups of young people who participated in the VNR process, as reported by UN Country Teams and governments

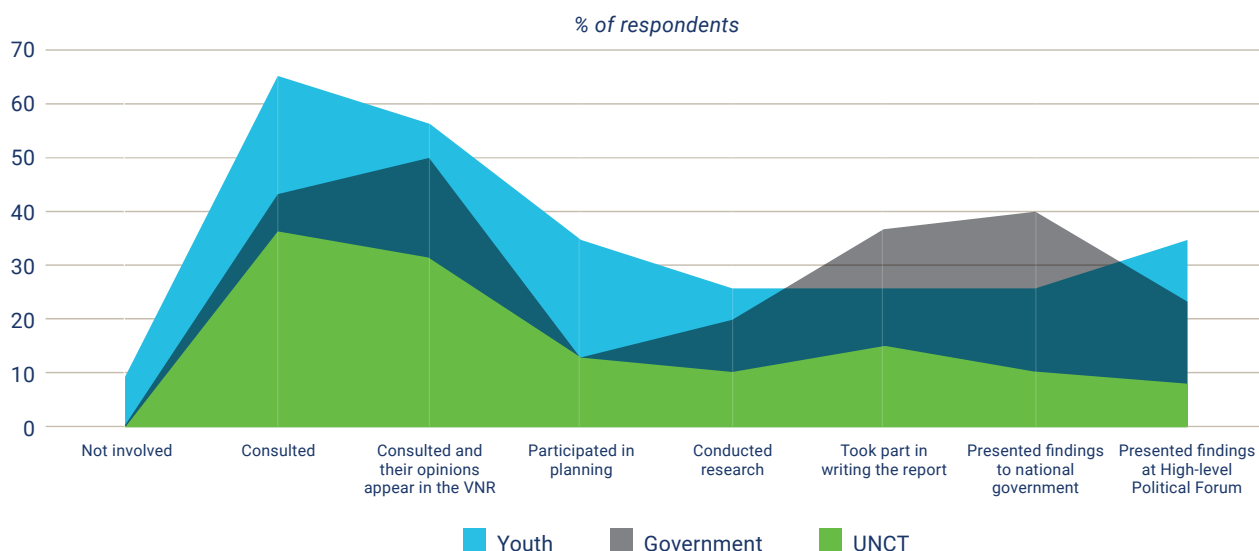

20. This does not necessarily mean that young people did not participate in the other seven countries, it only means that in 18 countries out of the 25 surveyed, did respondents say that young people had participated.

When asked about the nature of youth participation in VNR processes, it was clear that young people considered their own participation to mostly consist of being consulted (see Figure 4.18). In contrast, government representatives thought of it as more substantial or meaningful, including writing reports and presenting findings to authorities. Put another way, members of the triad often disagree over where their support to young people sits on the participation ladder. This may be indicative of the ‘newness’ of the review process in many contexts, or it may point to hidden barriers to young people shaping the process.

Figure 4.18: Youth participation in VNR processes as reported by young people, UN Country Teams and government representatives

Despite this, according to UN Country Teams, young people do appear to be given opportunities to be involved in presenting VNR findings to the UN High-Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development (HLPF) established in 2012 to monitor and guide progress towards the SDGs.<sup>21</sup> The deep dives also revealed examples of UN entities and governments collaborating to support young people’s inclusion in VNRs (see box: Thailand’s VNR).

Thailand’s VNR

Supported by UNFPA, Thailand’s Development Affairs Division led on conducting a VNR in 2021. As part of it, they engaged three youth networks and asked them to share their comments on the first draft of the report. Although the youth networks did not ask for substantive edits, they had much to say about how young people could be supported to be more involved in future decision-making around issues related to the SDGs in general and VNR processes in particular.

The youth networks argued that there is a low level of awareness of the SDGs among their peers, and that a potential solution would be to include information on them in the national curriculum. They also suggested that young people could be given time and funding to work on projects related to the SDGs, and that this should count towards their school credits. Lastly, they called for more channels for a diverse range of people to participate in the VNRs, including more online opportunities. All three recommendations made it into the final report.

Reflecting on the process, a Thai government representative argued that a hidden benefit of including young people in presentations to the HLPF in New York was the informal conversations that took place between Thai officials and young people on the sidelines of the trip. These conversations provided insights into young people’s thinking on issues related to the SDGs, and motivated those who attended to continue relevant work long after.

21. <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/hlpf>

4.8 Feedback

Closing 'feedback loops' and participatory evaluations are important for building strong social accountability relationships. Closing the feedback loop refers to how duty bearers respond to those who engage them, whether that consists of promises to consider their advice, or fully changing the way a service is provided or a policy's direction. Participatory evaluations allow those supported by programs, services and policies to assess them using values and metrics that have meaning in their lives.

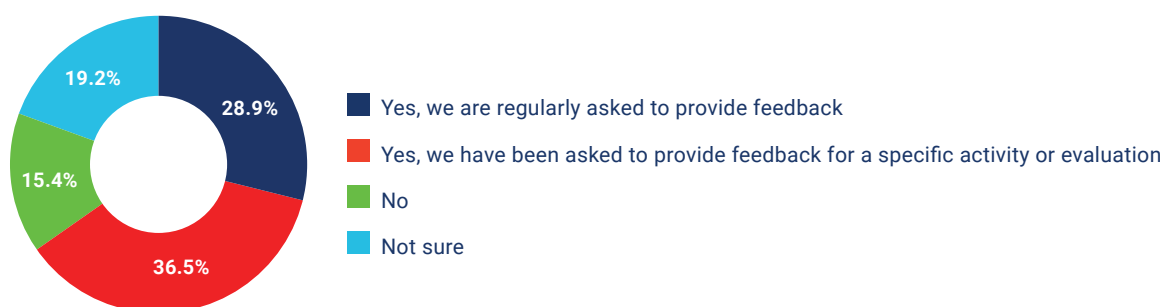

When asked, government representatives most commonly said they kept young people up-to-date through social media, published reports or documents, and face-to-face or virtual meetings (see Figure 4.19). In contrast, traditional media, community or religious leaders and VNR processes were less frequently cited as communications mechanisms. This may reflect efforts to 'go where young people are' when it comes to keeping them abreast of government responses. But it also raises the possibility of excluding those without the capacity to access or digest reports and project documents.

Figure 4.19: Ways governments keep young people up-to-date on the implementation of the SDGs, as reported by governments, by # of countries

Over half of UN Country Team respondents said that their initiatives were not monitored or evaluated, or that they were not sure if they were (see Figure 4.20). While the majority of young people indicated that they had been asked to provide some form of feedback to UN entities, only about a third said this was in relation to an evaluation of a specific social accountability-related activity. Although encouraging, this may reflect a culture of feedback that falls short of robust participatory evaluation.

Figure 4.20: Young people's experiences being asked to provide feedback on UN support to youth, by % of young respondents

CREDIT: ActionAid

5. What works?

Research participants were asked to identify examples of outcomes arising from UN entities' support for young people's participation in decision-making around the SDGs and holding governments to account. However, identifying attribution and measuring the impact of social accountability initiatives is difficult. Many were concerned that what they saw as good outcomes arising from their work would not count.

Added to this, what should be considered evidence of success varies from country to country. For example in some enabling environments, networking and brokering relationships between youth organizations interested in the SDGs is a good outcome of UN support. In others, the government's wholesale adoption of recommended regulations, policies or laws are achievable aims (see box: Windows of opportunity and critical junctures).

Windows of opportunity and critical junctures

Countries are always changing. Issues and leaders emerge and begin to take the spotlight, or institutions, economic dynamics and social norms adapt to long-running internal and external events. This can create windows of opportunity for types of social accountability initiatives previously thought impossible. Often this takes the form of brokering connections between reform-minded individuals inside government, and those outside of government who can offer technical advice and a political base. The UN Country Team's work in Pakistan took this form, with it playing a brokering and convening role between key ministries, technical experts and youth groups.

Enabling environments can also change rapidly. Although often only perceivable afterwards, such situations are often known as 'critical junctures'. Examples include crises such as economic crashes or pandemics, the rise of social movements, the discovery of new resources, or a change in leadership/government. Our discussions with research respondents in Albania revealed how the UN Country Team's work capitalized upon, and was buttressed by, ongoing social and political dynamics. Meanwhile, UN Country Team members in Jordan suggested youth members of its HeForShe network were well-positioned to raise awareness of increases in domestic violence and where to find services when COVID-19 restrictions began.

Accordingly, this section describes potential outcomes from UN support to young people that cover a spectrum. It runs from awareness-raising, mobilization and networking, to capacity-building, consultation and advocacy, and then to participation in platforms and governance processes that allow for regular young duty bearer engagements, and, finally, to duty bearers' commitments and policy changes.

Theoretically, these outcomes are progressively easier to achieve in more inclusive, transparent, and responsive enabling environments. Yet, they should not be understood as better than one another, as each is important for fostering the conditions for healthy social accountability relationships. Figure 5.1 provides a visual for thinking about these potential outcomes.<sup>22</sup>

Figure 5.1: Spectrum of potential social accountability outcomes

5.1 What and where outcomes are claimed

Young people in 14 countries shared examples of outcomes achieved related to SDG accountability. Young people most commonly claimed outcomes at the national level, followed by online/digital space and local/community. Though young people most commonly claimed outcomes across a number of levels, those in Albania claimed outcomes at the national level only, while those in Guatemala and Thailand claimed outcomes at the local or sub-national level only.

Figure 5.2: Levels of outcomes shared by young people, by # of countries

UN Country Team respondents from nine countries also shared the levels at which their claimed outcomes occur, with all reporting outcomes at the national level (see Figure 5.3). This was followed by outcomes at the sub-national or local level, which were reported in five countries (Cambodia, Ghana, India, Morocco, Uzbekistan) and online outcomes in four countries (Guatemala, Jordan, Morocco and Uzbekistan). This may reflect the increasing use of such spaces since the COVID-19 pandemic, and the relative ease of accessing and supporting young people to engage duty bearers online.

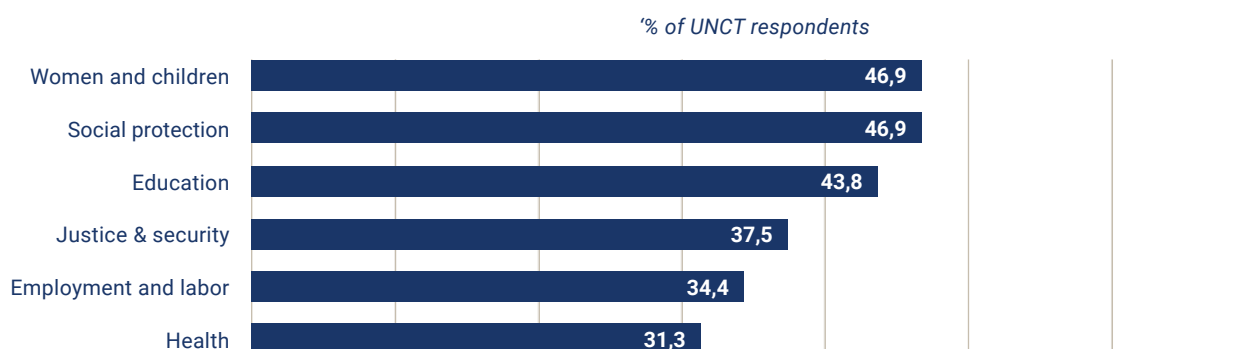

22. Observers may notice the absence of accountability mechanisms on the spectrum. This is because the research did not uncover instances of UN entities' support leading to the establishment or use of accountability mechanisms.

Figure 5.3: Levels at which young people and UN Country Teams claim results, as a % of respondents from each group Outcomes claimed by UN Country Teams were generally related to the women and children, health, and education sectors, likely reflecting the mandates of UNFPA, UNICEF, UNDP and UN Women. The next most-commonly cited sectors were culture and sport, social protection, and employment and labor. This may be because youth-focused ministries and departments are also often mandated to oversee these areas. It may also reflect the common misplaced belief that livelihoods, security and justice, and planning are ‘adult’ issues, with little relevance to young people.

Figure 5.4: Sectors where UN Country Team results are claimed, as a % respondents

Young people tend to agree with UN Country Teams that most outcomes relate to women and children, and education. However, they did not suggest any outcomes in the justice and security sector, but they did report outcomes in the technology and health sectors. This may indicate different understandings of the impact of the claimed outcomes.

Figure 5.5: Sectors where young people’s results are claimed, as a % respondents

5.2 Outcomes from UN Country Teams’ support

UN Country Team and young respondents’ descriptions of their work illustrate what the spectrum of outcomes in Figure 5.5 look like in practice, and why they are important for social accountability relationships.

At one end are examples of initiatives that raise awareness among, mobilize and network young people. For example, in Guatemala, the UN Resident Coordinator’s Office has spearheaded awareness-raising of sustainable development issues among students enrolled in university communication and international relations departments. The hope is that they will be well-placed to participate in decision-making forums and to engage the government in the near future. Meanwhile, since 2015, UN Women has supported the Arabic arm of the global HeForShe movement in Jordan.<sup>23</sup> With the agency’s support the movement has mobilized more than 30,000 young people across the kingdom, and engaged more than 500 volunteers in universities and communities to spread awareness of issues related to gender equality and human rights.

For many a next step is to support the consultation of young people on issues important to them, and to related advocacy. In Albania, for instance, UNICEF sought to ensure young people’s voices were heard by the government’s initiative on reducing violence in schools. As part of this, round tables were held with 1,000 students in 20 schools to gather information. A technical consultant was also hired to help use the information to develop local and national strategies that promote positive behaviors. Meanwhile in Kenya, UNFPA worked in partnership with youth networks to support a Youth Caravan that traveled across the country consulting young people about issues affecting them and raising awareness of their rights. At the end, a communique was drafted and read to government representatives during the 2019 International Conference on Population and Development in Nairobi.

The creation of platforms that allow for more regular engagements between young people and other triad members can also be important in some contexts. For example, in Jordan, UN entities supported the establishment of the Youth Peace and Security 2250 National Coalition. It consists of 22 member organizations representing INGOs, NGOs, youth organizations and academia working for peace and security across the kingdom, and it operates under the umbrella of the Ministry of Youth. The coalition currently provides networking opportunities for its members, and regular moments for engaging government officials and the country’s political leadership around shared issues. The next challenge is to translate this activity to action (see box: From advocacy to implementation).

23. <https://www.heforshe.org/en>

From advocacy to implementation

Although there is much evidence of close working relationships between Jordan's UN Country Team and youth and government representatives, young people interviewed for this research were clear about the challenges ahead. They argued that, "UNFPA made it easy for us to meet with the Ministry of Youth to talk about youth issues of peace and security, as well as the Crown Prince's Organization, which is important in Jordan." However, further support and leverage is likely to be needed by the UN to ensure that recommendations they give to the government are implemented. Indeed, there were concerns that their meetings with officials often led to little in the way of action.

These concerns were echoed by young people in other deep dive countries. They suggested that while networking, mobilization, capacity-building and engagement opportunities with duty bearers are often well-supported by UN entities, they are not always as well followed up as they could be. This was coupled with a conviction that UN entities should leverage their influence with governments to ensure recommendations become reality.

Youth organizations in Guatemala cited similar challenges. They noted that once an agreement has been made, "the UN's action ends and it is the government's obligation to continue it. Sometimes government interest wanes." Young people noted that additional follow up and monitoring from UN entities to ensure agreed actions remain government priorities, would help close this accountability loop.

At the far end of the spectrum are examples of behavior and policy changes. Here, the emphasis is often on specific issues for which young people's voices and carefully targeted technical and policy advice can be combined to great effect.

In Thailand, for example, UNFPA worked with the Child and Youth Council of Thailand to build the capacity of young people to gather evidence and conduct advocacy on Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights. They raised three recommendations to the National Committee responsible for the implementation of the Prevention and Alleviation of Adolescent Pregnancy Act, and kept the issues alive in the media. This contributed to the Ministry of Public Health issuing an inter-ministerial memorandum of understanding in 2020 on ensuring all pregnant adolescents and young people stay in the education system.

In Albania, representatives from student organizations have been supported to conduct advocacy directed at the Ministry of Education. This has contributed to a change in the schools' Code of Ethics and to the Strategy for Education 2021-2026's focus on non-violent behavior. A contract on positive behavior in schools has since been signed by 20,000 teachers, students and parents, confirming their obligations to one another.

Meanwhile in Pakistan, UNFPA has worked closely with the Federal and Provincial Ministries of Education, the Prime Minister's Office and youth organizations to achieve significant outcomes around life skills training, for both in- and out-of-school adolescents and young people. Among them are policy changes that will see the roll out of a life skills focused curriculum during 2022, and a social media campaign supported by the Prime Minister's National Youth Development Program to raise awareness about life skills. Youth organizations and networks put the issue on the agenda of both the provincial and federal governments by directly lobbying government representatives in meetings. They established the issue as being high priority for the country's young people, after which youth organizations brought UNFPA in to strengthen the partnership and provide technical assistance.

Yet, in some contexts, the enabling environment favors initiatives that involve young people in the development of broad policies and legislation – from inception to uptake or passing – with the potential to affect multiple sectors and SDGs.

In Albania, recent political developments, including youth movements and a change in government, have arguably opened up the enabling environment for youth participation in decision-making. This did not go unnoticed by UN Country Team members, who capitalized on windows of opportunity. Notably, UNFPA worked with the Ministry of Education, Sports and Youth as it drafted its first Law on Youth in 2019. It made sure that more than 2,000 young people across the country participated in consultations and, in cooperation with the Olof Palme Center (an international NGO), held a national conference on the draft law. Participants included representatives of line ministries, local self-government units, youth organizations and networks and youth experts and activists. This led to the establishment of a working group to facilitate further engagements, the hiring of legal experts for its members to consult, and support to youth-led advocacy with respective Parliamentary Commissions. UNFPA also ensured the law synergized with Albania's National Youth Action Plan 2020-2030, for which multiple UN entities had supported young people to participate in its creation.

In Kenya, various UN entities worked closely with the State Department for Youth Affairs to develop Kenya's National Youth policy. The government was keen that the policy was 'co-created' with young people, so held grassroots-level forums across the whole country to consult young people at multiple levels of governance ahead of its development. The resulting policy promotes the creation of sustainable decent jobs and income-generating opportunities for all young people, with an emphasis on building digital skills and leveraging young people's affinity to new technologies. It contains a coordination framework to ensure it is taken up by government structures at all levels, and implemented in coordination with grassroots groups. It also proposes a focus on the development of a 'Youth Development Index' to track and measure the impact of initiatives, programs, projects and activities.

A similar process was followed in Guatemala, where youth organizations are working together with UNFPA to create the conditions for the review of the country's National Youth Policy. Together, in 2020, they facilitated 900 young people's representatives to participate in virtual policy consultations, covering local, regional and national levels. An additional platform was also developed to allow university students to participate. This process identified issues that corresponded to young people's priorities, and where the government was best placed to respond. This formed the basis of an action plan to be used in the development of the updated policy. Participating youth organizations cited the importance of VNR reporting and the SDGs more broadly in underpinning this process, which set the stage for the youth policy to become one of the country's development priorities.

It is tempting to argue that all-encompassing behavior, policy and legislative changes of this sort are the 'better' outcomes with more 'impact'. However, this would ignore the wide range of enabling environments within which UN Country Teams work to support young people, and dismiss activities, developments and relationships that set the stage for future participation and engagements. Instead, the task is to carefully assess what the opportunities are in each context, and where young people can be most usefully aided to work towards transformational change.

6. Recommendations

Participants in this research were asked for their views on how UN entities can best support young people and governments to strengthen accountability relationships crucial for the SDGs. This section first considers how young people can be directly supported by UN entities. It then turns to how they can be supported indirectly through UN entities' support to governments.

6.1 UN entities' direct support to young people (with)

Young people and UN Country Team members were asked to rank which forms of support were most crucial to allow young people to participate in social accountability initiatives related to the SDGs. The responses were scored on a 5-point scale, using weighted averages (Figure 6.1).

Figure 6.1: Scores given to forms of support for young people and accountability, by UN Country Team and young people

On average, both UN Country Teams and youth respondents ranked capacity-building to be the most important form of support, followed very closely by funding. However, UN Country Team respondents considered capacity-building relatively more important than young people did.

Discussions with young people in deep dive countries added detail to the forms of direct support they wanted from UN entities. In particular, three recommendations stood out:

- 1 Reach beyond the usual suspects. As touched upon in Section 4.3, young people felt that UN entities should work harder to support difficult-to-reach and marginalized groups. For example, a UN Country Team member in Jordan raised the issue of more support for stateless young people caught between development and humanitarian programs. In Thailand, a government respondent argued that the UN Country Team should seek to work with young people outside of large urban centers, and lend its credibility to them when they participate in governance forums. It was argued this can be achieved through innovative funding mechanisms and small grants distributed among networks that have a presence among grassroots civil society organizations.
- 2 Raise awareness about and translate the SDGs. Many young people suggested that there is a need for UN entities to raise awareness of the SDGs beyond young people they directly engage in programs, and to translate their rationales into language they can easily understand, including more succinct measures of progress towards targets. In Albania, young people also argued that the SDGs struggle for space and to be understood alongside the country's ongoing goal of accession into the European Union and all the policies that seek to ensure its success. They suggested that more work has to be done to show how the SDGs fit with countries' existing goals.
- 3 Capitalize on what young people are already doing. Some young people argued that they are already part of successful initiatives and efforts to engage duty bearers, and that with UN support they could scale up their activities and have greater impact. For example, in Kenya, national and sub-national governments are attending grassroots level forums across the country with youth groups and organizations. Their aim is to engage young people in decision-making around governance issues, and the government is open to hearing criticism about key issues, as one government official observed: "it is ok for the youth to be critical, it is how they communicate". This initiative is taking place without UN support, but youth organizations could be supported to prioritize their advocacy agendas and build evidence by UN entities in order to make these opportunities more effective for addressing issues that matter to young people.

6.2 UN entities' indirect support to young people (for)

Similar to youth groups, government representatives also ranked capacity-building and funding for platforms as the topmost important forms of support from UN entities. Networking with young people and support during engagements were less requested.

Figure 6.2: Scores given to forms of support for government and accountability, by government

Discussions with government representatives and the wider research findings suggested three ways for UN entities to indirectly support young people to engage in social accountability initiatives:

- 1 Behind-the-scenes brokering and networking. Although the survey results suggested governments felt there was less of a need for such support, discussions revealed that they often benefited from UN entities connecting them to youth groups. For example, UNICEF supports multiple Jordanian ministries' SDG Working Groups by building the capacity of young people to gather data and evidence to present to them during consultations and regular platforms. Meanwhile in Thailand, UN entities helped prepare the ground for its VNRs by arranging meetings between officials and youth groups. For many, however, it was important for ownership and the legitimacy of engagements that they be led by the government or young people, rather than by UN entities.
- 2 Challenge tokenism and follow up. Across the deep dive countries, young people often argued that consultations and decision-making platforms could feel tokenistic. They complained that, although their opinions are sought, they do not know what happens next and rarely see the results of engagements. This was leading to skepticism of UN entities' motives in supporting them to take part. As one described: "there is a silly game played by politicians, capitalists. They create organizations for youth to volunteer as a way to mobilize youth to vote for them. In short, using youth as instruments." For many, UN entities must ensure there is follow up after consultations and platforms, and the feedback loop is closed, by communicating back to young people what has changed, or not, as a result of their participation.
- 3 Lend credibility and amplify marginalized voices. Youth representatives from deep dive countries urged UN entities to use their position and leverage (often through funding governments directly) to open up spaces for harder-to-reach young people, or those who governments do not always want to engage with (e.g. LGBTQI+ youth). There was a real sense that the UN's influence was essential to their voices being heard and responded to. As one respondent put it, "Where the UN helps, they bring in the necessity of the government to respond. When a UN agency is involved, they keep the pressure to be responsive and make it harder to shut off organizations." This was seen as particularly important in places where governments are most comfortable engaging with young people who do not challenge them.

6.3 Strengthening UN entities

The research findings also point to two recommendations for UN Country Teams as they continue to seek to support young people to participate in decision-making and hold governments to account:

- 1 Define social accountability. Social accountability is not a new concept for many UN entities, and has been a goal of programs and partners for over a decade. Still, the research suggested that UN Country Teams have a diverse range of views on what contributes to social accountability. As discussed in Section 5, this is in-part likely due to the variety of enabling environments that UN Country Teams work in and the possibilities they provide for supporting young people.

Yet, during discussions with UN Country Teams from the deep dive countries, very few depicted accountability as an end goal of young people's participation in consultations, engagements and platforms. Participation is necessary, but not sufficient, for social accountability. Indeed, it can only be secured by building strong relationships between triad members, regular and transparent information on progress towards the SDGs, and mechanisms for sanctioning poor performance.

This suggests further work may be needed to help UN Country Teams map out how supported initiatives contribute to social accountability. This may also help UN Country Teams spot instances where youth participation strays into tokenism – or where windows of opportunity arise for transformative change. Here, UN entities could learn from their peers and partners that have long used 'theories of change' and participatory monitoring to think through and reality check their support for social accountability.

2 Set clear, contextually-relevant and realistic goals. Related to the need for robust thinking about how UN Country Teams' support to triad members contributes to social accountability, UN Country Teams should also set clear and realistic goals. As discussed in Sections 4.1 and 5, the enabling environment partly structures the potential outcomes of UN Country Teams' work. But it does not completely determine them. Rather, the energy, creativity and innovation of young people and duty bearers can drive transformative change.

With this in mind, UN Country Teams should continue to see themselves as catalysts of such relationships. Yet, they must also be confident about the outcomes they aim for on the spectrum outlined in Section 5. This will aid them to better articulate how awareness-raising, capacity-building and networking contribute to the conditions needed to support behavior and policy changes, or even to hold duty bearers to account. It may also help them not to unduly raise expectations among young people and duty bearers. To do this, UN Country Teams must ensure they understand their enabling environment's challenges and opportunities, begin their interventions with realistic goals, and strive to support meaningful participation of young people.

6.4 Conclusion

This report explored the ways the UN is supporting young people to engage in participatory decision-making processes, and to hold duty bearers in their governments to account for the realization of the SDGs. The research uncovered a range of activities and processes supported at different levels of governance by UN entities. It also described outcomes from UN support to young people that cover a broad spectrum. It runs from awareness-raising, mobilization and empowerment, to capacity-building, consultation and advocacy, and then to commitments to behavior and policy changes. Each is more or less possible, depending on the enabling environments in which UN entities and young people work together. And each is an important step towards transformative change. The report concluded with recommendations on how UN entities can support young people and strengthen social accountability relationships across different contexts.

Bibliography

- ActionAid, Believe in Better. Working paper, 2020 <https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/Believe-in-Better.pdf>
- Arnstein, S. (1969.) 'A ladder of citizen participation'. Journal of the American Planning Association, 35(4): 216–224
- Fox, J. (2008) Accountability Politics: Power and Voice in Rural Mexico. Oxford: Oxford University Press
- HeForShe, Homepage <https://www.heforshe.org/en>
- United Nations, High-level Political Forum on Sustainable Development <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/hlpf>
- United Nations, The Cooperation Framework <https://unsdg.un.org/2030-agenda/cooperation-framework>
- United Nations, U-Report <https://www.unicef.org/innovation/U-Report>
- United Nations, Transforming our world: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, Resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 25 September 2015 https://www.un.org/ga/search/view\_doc.asp?symbol=A/RES/70/1&Lang=E
- United Nations, Voluntary National Reviews <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/vnrs/>
- United Nations, Youth2030: A Global Progress Report, 2021 <https://www.unyouth2030.com/progressreport>
- United Nations, Youth 2030 UNCT Scorecard, 2020 <https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2020/11/Youth-2030-UNCT-Scorecard.pdf>
- United Nations, Youth2030 Strategy, 2018 <https://www.unyouth2030.com/about>
- UNDP, Fostering Social Accountability, 2010 https://www.undp.org/content/dam/undp/library/Democratic Governance/OGC/dg-ogc-Fostering Social Accountability-Guidance Note.pdf
- UNDP, What does it mean to leave no one behind? 2018 <https://www.undp.org/publications/what-does-it-mean-leave-no-one-behind>

Annex 1: Details on study participants

The survey was shared with individuals from 37 countries. Overall, a total of 433 individuals from 35 countries participated in the survey. In an effort to ensure responses from each survey could be analyzed jointly, countries where only one of the three 'triad' members (UN Country Team, government, youth networks) responded were excluded. Therefore, in total, responses covering 25 countries were used for this review. Across these 25 countries, a total of 105 UN Country Team representatives, 99 government representatives and 229 youth network representatives participated in the survey.

Regional breakdown of 25 survey countries

Africa	Asia Pacific	Europe and Central Asia	Latin America and Caribbean	Arab States
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Cameroon</li> <li>• Ghana</li> <li>• Kenya</li> <li>• Rwanda</li> <li>• Somalia</li> <li>• Togo</li> <li>• Zimbabwe</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Cambodia</li> <li>• India</li> <li>• Lao PDR</li> <li>• Pakistan</li> <li>• Thailand</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Albania</li> <li>• Kosovo</li> <li>• North Macedonia</li> <li>• Serbia</li> <li>• Uzbekistan</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Brazil</li> <li>• Costa Rica</li> <li>• Dominican Republic</li> <li>• Guatemala</li> <li>• Ecuador</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Iraq</li> <li>• Jordan</li> <li>• Morocco</li> </ul>

To gain a deeper insight into the UN's support to the triad's relationships, qualitative data was gathered remotely from seven 'deep dive' countries selected from the 37 surveyed countries. Kenya, Ghana, Thailand, Albania, Jordan, Pakistan, and Guatemala.

Resource Compendium

Contents

Case Studies	49
Evaluations &amp; Reviews	56
Studies and Blogs	59
Reports	63
Tools	70

Contributing United Nations Country Teams

Africa (16)	Arab States (2)	Asia Pacific (7)	Europe and Central Asia (5)	Latin America and the Carribean (7)
Benin	Iraq	Bhutan	Albania	Brazil
Burundi	Jordan	Cambodia	Kosovo	Colombia
Cameroon		India	North Macedonia	Costa Rica
Gabon		Lao People's	Serbia	Dominican Republic
Gambia		Democratic Republic	Uzbekistan	Ecuador
Ghana		Pakistan		Guatemala
Kenya		Thailand		Uruguay
Morocco		Viet Nam
Niger
Rwanda
Sao Tome and Principe
Somalia
Sudan
Tanzania
Togo
Zimbabwe

RESOURCE TYPE:

Case Studies

CREDIT: ActionAid

Case Studies

All resources are in English.

Source Title	Country	Region	Short description and relevance to the study	How to access
Youth Political Participation in Albania	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	Report on the extent of youth political participation (and accountability channels) in Albania. See 'Vora Youth Advisory Board' (p.29-31) for case study on how youngsters at the level of local politics increase their participation in decision making and further foster transparency and accountability.	http://partnersalbania.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/01/Youth_Political_Participation_Albania_2018.pdf
Strengthening the Rights of Every Child	Brazil	Latin America & Caribbean	Beginning on p.30 there is a story told about a Save The Children scheme in Fortaleza, Brazil, where young people were actively engaged in municipal budgeting and monitoring of public spending. An overview of actual methods used starts on p.40.	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/2989/pdf/2989.pdf
Turi Kumwe (We Are Together) in Burundi (2020)	Burundi	Africa	An on-going project which aims to strengthen the level of engagement by Burundian youth in peacebuilding opportunities (SDG16).	https://www.counterpart.org/projects/we-are-together-in-burundi/
Engaging Youth in Municipal Youth Policy Development (Santa, Northwest Cameroon) (2019)	Cameroon	Africa	Between 2010 and 2015, youth leaders developed a Municipal Youth Policy in Santa, Northwest Cameroon, as a means to promote greater youth voice and participation in municipal governance and decision making. Various social accountability tools on display.	https://participedia.net/case/5176
Youth Implementing the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (2015)	Costa Rica	Latin America & Caribbean	Outlines a youth capacity building scheme where young people identified the environmental issues most concerning to their lives and were mobilised to raise awareness of said issues, flooding and waste disposal being the most significant (p.99).	https://www.un.org/development/desa/youth/wp-content/uploads/sites/21/2019/02/chapter6-wyr-2030agenda.pdf
Youth in action on climate change: inspirations from around the world (2013)	Costa Rica	Latin America & Caribbean	There are two case studies from Costa Rica in this document (p.24 and p.75), both of which refer to youth-led movements to seek progressive climate change action. The latter is particularly relevant in terms of social accountability mechanisms as it refers to a series of roundtable discussions where young people were able to present the issues most pressing to them.	http://unfccc.int/resource/docs/publications/publication_youth_2013.pdf
For Youth, by Youth: Improving Healthcare (2015)	Dominican Republic	Latin America & Caribbean	A short video outlining a small-scale effort to train young people to evaluate health services, where many young people are denied access. With their evaluations they were able to prove to the government that service provision was inadequate. (No written report could be found for this initiative).	https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0pGBJgRH_Gc
Chapter VI Youth Implementing the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development	General	General	Includes Costa Rica, Algeria, Philippines and Zimbabwe case studies p.99, 106 and 107.	https://www.un.org/development/desa/youth/wp-content/uploads/sites/21/2019/02/chapter6-wyr-2030agenda.pdf

Changing Lives through social accountability	General	General	Case studies were written and prepared by World Vision staff implementing social accountability programs in Armenia, Bolivia, India, Kenya, Malawi, Nepal, Senegal, South Sudan, Uganda, and Zambia.	https://www.wvi.org/sites/default/files/Changing%20Lives%20Through%20Social%20Accountability.pdf
ActionAid: Champions and change-makers: Young people holding their governments accountable for SDG commitments	General	General	Case studies on Bangladesh, Denmark, Ghana, Kenya, Myanmar, Tanzania, Uganda, and Zambia.	https://actionaid.org/sites/default/files/publications/Champions%20and%20Change-Makers%20Holding%20Governments%20Accountable.pdf
Moving Data from the Bottom Up to Harness the Power of Communities	General	General	Case studies on Bangladesh, Kenya, India, and Nepal.	https://sdg.iisd.org/commentary/guest-articles/moving-data-from-the-bottom-up-to-harness-the-power-of-communities/
The Power of Youth Voices: How Youth Are Holding Their Health Systems Accountable for Family Planning and Reproductive Health (2021)	General	General	Contains an excellent case study of a grassroots youth-led network in Zimbabwe where youth data reporters use scorecards to collect and analyze quantitative and qualitative data from the district health facility level. The data they collect is then used for a variety of purposes, including informing policy dialogues at a district level, budgeting for services, and advocating for changes in cultural, religious, and traditional practices that hinder youth access (p.31).  There is also a case study from India, where young people are holding the state to account for better quality maternal health services (p.35).	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/19079/pdf/mcgl_youth_social_accountability_landscape_final.pdf
A Study on the Role and Contributions of Youth to Peace and Security in Africa (2020)	Ghana	Africa	A broader report on how young Africans are promoting peace and security (SDG 16). Specifically on Ghana, see p.91 for examples of youth groups using community engagement strategies to create dialogue between belligerent parties and to hold them to account, motivated by the desire for their own freedom and peace.	https://www.peaceau.org/uploads/a-study-on-the-roles-and-contributions-of-youth-to-peace-and-security-in-africa-17-sept-2020.pdf
Civic-Care Project: Voice-Out, Step-Up, Take Action	Ghana	Africa	A project designed by and for young people to connect and engage through civic-skills acquisition, designated space, and the use of knowledge products, mobile phones, and social media to actively participate in the development of communities. See p.13 for specific tools, mainly exemplified by advocacy programs.	https://en.unesco.org/news/youth-voiced-out-stepped-and-took-actions-sustainable-development-through-civic-care-project
Ghana: Youth Take the Lead in Addressing Poor Health Services	Ghana	Africa	A Plan International project that aims to reduce maternal mortality in Ghana by empowering young women and men in rural Ghana to hold district assembly members and health service providers accountable in order to ensure effective sexual and reproductive healthcare delivery, including maternal healthcare.	https://plan-international.org/eu/case-study-ghana-adolescent-sexual-and-reproductive-health
Promoting youth and female participation in the delivery of public infrastructure (2019)	Guatemala	Latin America & Caribbean	The project involved series of social audit workshops to build the capacity of young community leaders to monitor infrastructure projects and to increase oversight and accountability.	https://sdgs.un.org/es/node/33618

Youth-Led Anti-Corruption Movement in Post-Conflict Guatemala: 'Weaving the Future?' (2019)	Guatemala	Latin America & Caribbean	A very strong example of what youth-led accountability can achieve. In 2015, youth-led anti-corruption protests and social media advocacy led to the resignation of the president and vice-president.	https://bulletin.ids.ac.uk/index.php/idsbo/article/view/3048/Online%20article
Transformative Accountability for Adolescents	India	Asia Pacific	Case study on India, page 40	https://www.everywomaneverychild.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/10/IAP-Annual-Report-2017-online-final-web_with-endnotes.pdf
Enhancing social accountability through adolescent and youth leadership: a case study on sexual and reproductive health from Gujarat, India (2021)	India	Asia Pacific	An overview of an Oxfam project to develop accountability mechanisms for young people, particularly those with marginalised identities (women with disabilities, trans persons). Tools include capacity building of peer leaders to mobilise young people in their villages, creating local support systems for adolescents and young people, and engaging with public systems that deliver health and nutrition programs.	https://policy-practice.oxfam.org/resources/enhancing-social-accountability-through-adolescent-and-youth-leadership-a-case-621172/
Urban Update: Cities for People (2019)	India	Asia Pacific	On p.9 is a case study of youth empowerment and advocacy activities on water and sanitation in Nagpur. Youth both measure water quality and advocate for improvements.	https://issuu.com/urbanupdatemag/docs/urbanupdate_july_2019
UN World Youth Report (2018)	India	Asia Pacific	Though a broader report on youth involvement in the SDGs, p.103 contains a case study from India, where the 'Butterfly Project' is supporting young women's participation in policymaking and community advocacy. For example: they used community survey results to rally their neighbours and other families to promote gender equality and recognition of women's unpaid labour.	https://www.un.org/development/desa/youth/wp-content/uploads/sites/21/2018/12/WorldYouthReport-2030Agenda.pdf
SDG Accountability Handbook case studies	Kenya	Africa	Kenya case study	https://www.sdgaccountability.org/case-studies/
Changing Lives through social accountability: Case Studies from World Vision's UK Government's Department for International Development (DFID) Programme Partnership Arrangement (2015)	Kenya	Africa	An example of vertical integration of social accountability, specifically with regards to education legislation. World Vision Kenya mobilised and sensitised communities on their entitlements to quality basic education and supported them to make submissions to the government task force on education reforms (p.10-12).	https://www.wvi.org/sites/default/files/Changing%20Lives%20Through%20Social%20Accountability.pdf
Macro Evaluation of DFID's Policy Frame for Empowerment and Accountability (2016)	Kenya	Africa	An evaluation of a social accountability program in Kenya implemented between 2010-2015. Though not focused on young people exclusively, it speaks to the positive effect the program had on young women in decision making at the local level and the role of model youth assemblies in making this participation possible (p.122 - 123).	https://assets.publishing.service.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment_data/file/707126/Empowerment-and-Accountability-and-Design-Stage-of-Gender-Work-Evaluation.pdf

Youth Leadership, Participation and Accountability 2.0: The Recommendations, Part One (2019)	Kenya	Africa	Two examples of Kenyan youth-led accountability organisations, both with a focus on how accountability can be achieved through technology and social media. The first refers to the 'Ladies Say Yes' mobilisation movement, and the later to a blockchain campaign for sexual health rights and increased access to safe contraception (p.16).	https://esaro.unfpa.org/sites/default/files/pub-pdf/Youth%20Leadership%20Participation%20and%20Accountability%20-%20The%20Recommendations%201.pdf
Engaging Youth in Citizen-Led Advocacy and Accountability for Adolescent Sexual and Reproductive Health (2019)	Kenya	Africa	Short report that outlines the White Ribbon Alliance mission to empower young girls to demand high quality sexual and reproductive health services, given the high burden of teenage pregnancy, maternal mortality, and STI/HIV rates among adolescents in Kenya.	https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC8279271/
Believe in Better: A Working Paper on Young People's Inclusion in National Follow Up, Review and Accountability Processes of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (2020)	Kenya	Africa	A case study of citizens' report cards, score cards and citizens' charters of demand from Kenya, making specific reference to the role of youth networks in these accountability mechanisms (p. 17). A similar country case study of Jordan, this one focussing on youth consultations in decision making, namely through roundtables/town halls (p.14).	https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/Believe-in-Better.pdf
OSCE Mission in Kosovo encourages youth participation in decision making (2011)	Kosovo	Europe & Central Asia	Refers to an example of local youth councils in Kosovo who deal with issues of concern to young people, providing unified representation for lobbying local institutions, thus creating a stronger impact for youth causes. They successfully lobbied to have more books added to their under-stocked local library.	https://reliefweb.int/report-serbia/osce-mission-kosovo-encourages-youth-participation-decision-making
Politics, persistence and publicity – transforming education in Pakistan (2016)	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A blog post about the successes of a youth-led, tech-based mission to improve education facilities. Describes their methods, including social media outreach (naming and shaming), public rallies, door-to-door campaigning and an awareness camp. The campaign was successful in unlocking funding for the development of better college facilities.	https://www.makingallovoicescount.org/blog/transforming-education-pakistan/
Young Somalis awarded for embracing social media to influence change (2018)	Somalia	Africa	An example of young people innovating to encourage their peers to participate in matters of governance, peace and state building, specifically through a blog writing competition - creating and encouraging engagement.	https://somalia.un.org/index.php/en/33518-young-somalis-awarded-embracing-social-media-influence-change
Champions and change-makers: Young people holding their governments accountable for SDG commitments	Tanzania	Africa	A case study of young people in Tanzania holding governments to account through social media use (p.14). In the context of shrinking civil society space, digitally mediated activism is a key mechanism for social accountability for young people.	https://actionaid.org/sites/default/files/publications/Champions%20and%20Change-Makers%20Holding%20Governments%20Accountable.pdf
Social Accountability Through Youth in Tanzania (2021)	Tanzania	Africa	An example of work being done to increase young people's ability to hold service providers to account. In this case, 350 young citizen monitors use an app to make reports and to identify and target key stakeholders.	https://integrityaction.org/what-we-do/initiatives/social-accountability-through-youth-in-tanzania/

Social Accountability through Youth (SAY) in Tanzania's Dodoma, Iringa and Morogoro regions (2021)	Tanzania	Africa	Project (SAY) aims to empower young people and excluded groups to lead 179 rural and marginalised communities in holding authorities and organisations delivering local projects and services to account. Focusses in particular on young people with disability.	https://devtracker.fcdo.gov.uk/projects/GB-CHC-1047653-SAY
Youths for SDGs in Thailand (2018)	Thailand	Asia Pacific	A summary of youth engagement day run by the UN SDG Action Campaign. Students from across Thailand were invited to learn about the SDGs and then to think of innovative ways that they as young people could participate in achieving progress toward the SDGs and to creating change in society. The focus of the session was sustainable waste management.	https://www2.sdgactioncampaign.org/2018/12/17/youths-for-sdgs-in-thailand/
Child and Youth-Centred Accountability: A Guide for Involving Young People in Monitoring & Evaluating Child Protection Systems (2012)	Thailand	Asia Pacific	Though a general document there is a heavy focus on Thailand (p.23), with detailed case studies of Thai youth participation groups (p.27) and community-based child protection schemes (p.49). Though not referring to SDGs explicitly, the document refers to aspects of human development and safety which are broadly included in the goals.	https://www.socialserviceworkforce.org/system/files/resource/files/Involving-Young-People-in-ME-Child-Protection-Systems.pdf
Meet the "16 x 16" young leaders (2016)	Togo	Africa	A profile on Ms Ameyovi Alice Goza, a human rights activist from Togo who is one of the leading youth voices in promoting the participation of her peers in issues of democracy, governance, human rights and peace. Her experiences (outlined in the profile) provide an interesting avenue for further research into youth social accountability in Togo.	https://www.youth4peace.info/basic-page/meet-16-x-16-young-leaders
SDG16+ in Cameroon: Progress towards peaceful, just and inclusive societies (2019)	Cameroon	Africa	Found on p.16 is an interesting appraisal of the state of youth participation in Cameroon, where the creation of a National Youth Council has been criticised for its lack of success (not a single member of the government is younger than 40, for example). The effect of this political and social exclusion has been, for many, radicalisation (p.17).	https://gppac.net/files/2019-07/GPPAC%20SDG%20Report%20Cameroon_def_online.pdf
Increasing youth participation in accountability mechanisms (2015)	General	General	There are a number of strong case-specific and analytic examples here, from Viet Nam (p.7), Kenya (p.8, 10), Ghana (p.9), Somalia (p.11).	https://gsdrc.org/wp-content/uploads/2016/02/HDQ1267.pdf
Local government accountability mechanisms (2014)	General	General	Though not a subject of this study, an exemplary case of youth social accountability can be found in Rosario, Argentina, where an annual participatory budgeting process is carried out with local youth in its municipal districts.	https://www.u4.no/publications/local-government-accountability-mechanisms
Ghana: Voluntary National Review Report on the Implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (June 2019)	Ghana	Africa	See p.77 for section overview on children and youth engagement and participation in SDGs implementation processes. See p.80 for more specific interventions by youth-focused/led CSOs.	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/23420VNR_Report_Ghana_Final_print.pdf

Progress towards peaceful, just and inclusive societies SDG 16+ in Ghana (2019)	Ghana	Africa	Light reference to youth participation in SDG related decision making in Ghana, but does so on a number of occasions (p.6; 7). On p.9 there is reference to youth focus groups, the result of which form the main body of this report.	https://gppac.net/files/2019-07/GPPAC%20SDG%20Report%20Ghana_def_online.pdf
Youth activists making a difference: Stories from the Field (2019)	Jordan	Arab States	Outlines a number of examples of how young people in Jordan are taking the lead on SDG 5 and 13, particularly with Youth Ambassadors leading discussions with key policy makers (meaningful inclusion).	https://www.un.org/sustainabledevelopment/blog/2019/04/youth-activists-making-a-difference-stories-from-the-field/
Kenya Voluntary National Review - Civil Society Report 2020	Kenya	Africa	Case study on use of tools by CSOs (p. 102)	https://gcap.global/wp-content/uploads/2020/07/Kenya-2020-CS-VNR.pdf
North Macedonia SDG Voluntary National Review (2020)	North Macedonia	Europe & Central Asia	Contains a very detailed overview of the activities of North Macedonian young people to make progress toward the SDGs, including a number of case studies, e.g. capacity building, workshops, and VNR consultations. Given the challenges that face young people in the country, there appears an impressively concerted effort to hold those in power to account and achieve youth-focused change (p. 100 - 104).	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/26388VNR_2020_Macedonia_Report.pdf
Country Office Annual Report: Sao Tome and Principe (2019)	Sao Tome and Principe	Africa	There is a mention to the establishment of a youth parliament (p. 4) tasked with representing the needs of young people and promoting youth led solutions to common environmental and health challenges.	https://www.unicef.org/media/90986/file/Sao-Tome-and-Principe-2019-COAR.pdf
UN in Zimbabwe Newsletter: Partnerships to Make the SDGs Reality for All (2016)	Zimbabwe	Africa	An overview of the mobilisation of young people to work toward the SDGs, specifically the Model UN Debate, and a student-led congress - the importance in terms of social accountability being the dissemination of knowledge of rights and entitlements, especially when with regards to climate (p. 6).	https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/UN%20in%20Zimbabwe%20Newsletter%20-%20Nov2016.pdf

RESOURCE TYPE:

Evaluations / Reviews

CREDIT: ActionAid

Evaluation/Review

All resources are in English.

Source Title	Country	Region	Short description and relevance to the study	How to access
Civic Participation of Adolescents and Youth (2014)	Brazil	Latin America & Caribbean	A wide-ranging review of youth participation in South America with a particular focus on Brazil. See p.30 for formalised youth accountability mechanisms (e.g. National Youth Council). There are many specific case study examples, see p.49, 55, 65, 68, 71, 73, most of which focus on political participation as a mechanism for accountability.	https://www.unicef.org/brazil/media/2486/file/Civic%20Participation%20of%20Adolescents%20and%20Youth.pdf
The Power of Youth Voices: How Youth are Holding their Health Systems Accountable for Family Planning and Reproductive Health	General	General	25 social accountability initiatives for FP/RH that were either youth-led or youth-inclusive (collectively referred to throughout this report as “youth social accountability”). Limited documentation of these social accountability initiatives made it difficult to discern the specific ways in which youth were involved, the extent to which it is meaningful, and the outcomes achieved.	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/19079/pdf/mcgl_youth_social_accountability_landscape_final.pdf
What’s the evidence? Youth engagement and the Sustainable Development Goals	General	General	Examines five programs across three youth-focused or youth-led organisations: Plan International UK, the Asian Development Bank (ADB), and AIESEC in Asia	https://www.adb.org/sites/default/files/publication/466811/youth-engagement-sdgs.pdf
Youth-led Accountability (2021)	General	General	A joint program targeting gender equality in India and Tanzania. The program has trained young people in both countries to engage with their peers, communities and local and national governments to build a movement that drives progress towards gender equality.	https://restlessdevelopment.org/youth-led-accountability/
Building Champions	Kenya	Africa	PACE trains youth advocates and members of the media to participate at every stage of the planning and budgeting cycle, creating an enabling environment and accountability for increased political and financial commitment.	https://thepaceproject.org/country-programs/kenya/
End Review of ACT!2030 Phases 1- 4: Youth-led, data-driven accountability for the Sustainable Development Goals (2018)	Kenya	Africa	A wider review of the ACT2030 youth accountability initiative. Kenya is mentioned in passing throughout, but there are short specific examples of youth-led accountability programs in Kenya on p.33 (social media advocacy campaign) and p.43 (youth-led data collection).	https://www.unaids.org/sites/default/files/Evaluation%20of%20ACT%212030%20Youth-led%2C%20data-driven%20accountability.pdf

Connecting Youth: Youth Inclusion and Entrepreneurship, Kosovo (2020)	Kosovo	Europe & Central Asia	A World Bank project to improve the socioeconomic position of Kosovar youth. Accountability mechanisms (outlined on p.9) include participatory needs assessments, focus groups, and dialogues with municipalities on youth-determined priorities.	https://documents1.worldbank.org/curated/en/672261586263881076/pdf/Project-Information-Document-Integrated-Safeguards-Data-Sheet-Connecting-Youth-Youth-Inclusion-and-Entrepreneurship-P166093.pdf
UN Lao PDR Progress Report (2019)	Lao PDR	Asia Pacific	Outlines efforts to strengthen capacity for evidence-based analysis, policy dialogue and advocacy for young people. As in other cases in Lao, this is predominantly led by the Lao Youth Union (LYU) who seem to be prominent in leading accountability initiatives (p. 42).	https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Final%20UNPF%20Progress%20Report%202019.pdf
Restless Development Annual Report: Tanzania (2019)	Tanzania	Africa	A very detailed overview of Restless Development's work with young people in Tanzania, numerous examples of social accountability mechanisms in practice. On p.10 there is discussion of youth evidence gathering and monitoring, as well as decision influencing; on p.19 there is a case study of young people holding the government to account over SDG5, supported by the evidence they had gathered. See also p.23 for another case study.	https://restlessdevelopment.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/06/Restless-Development-Tanzania-annual-report-2019.pdf
Workshop on "Introduction to the Child-Centred Social Accountability model" (2021)	Viet Nam	Asia Pacific	Though social accountability mechanisms seem to be established in Viet Nam, the involvement of young people appears rare. This is an overview of a workshop with key stakeholders, discussing the development of child-centered social accountability and establishing several pilot models in various regions.	https://www.crdvietnam.org/en/workshop-on-introduction-to-the-child-centered-social-accountability-model/
Youth Agenda Trust: "Building Capacities for Informed Youth Participation, Responsive Advocacy and Deliberate Policy Engagement" (2016)	Zimbabwe	Africa	The strategic roadmap of a Zimbabwe-based youth-focused NGO, its work is to develop youth participation in governance structures and holding those in power to account for their fundamental rights. Report highlights all of the viable opportunities for this work.	https://www.academia.edu/26624933/YOUTH_AGENDA_TRUST_YAT_Strategic_Road_Map_2016-2020_Building_Capacities_for_Informed_Youth_Participation_Responsive_Advocacy_and_Deliberate_Policy_Engagement_Demanding_a_Voice_in_Our_Own_Destiny
Implementation of the national strategy for youth on local level	Serbia	Europe & Central Asia	Summary of the existing normative framework and the structures to promote young people and support active youth participation at the local, regional and national levels.	https://www.youthpolicy.org/national/Serbia_2012_Youth_Policy_Local_Guidelines.pdf

RESOURCE TYPE:

Studies and Blogs

CREDIT: ActionAid

Studies and Blogs

All resources are in English.

Source Title	Country	Region	Short description and relevance to the study	How to access
Social Accountability and Child Rights Budget Analysis: Using government budgets to implement children's rights in Albania (2015)	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	A Save the Children manual focused on child centred budget analysis in Albania, including an examination of the tools and methods needed to facilitate children's active role in the monitoring and advocating of their rights in Albania. Examples include: PB, IBA, CRIA, PET, and child-led community score cards.	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/15356/pdf/social_accountability_and_child_rights_budget_analysis_manual.pdf
Voices of Youth in Post-conflict Burundi: Perspectives on Exclusion, Gender and Conflict (2007)	Burundi	Africa	Speaks to Burundian youth frustration, characterised by profound distrust in politicians and very little belief in the ability of government to deliver. Because of this, however, there is an increasing movement toward grassroots, youth-led movements - what the report calls a conducive environment for social accountability (p. 18).	https://documents1.worldbank.org/curated/ru/779501468014429156/689830ESW0P09500BurundiEnglishfinal.doc
Citizen and Youth Empowerment programme (2021)	Cambodia	Asia Pacific	Speaks to the goals of youth social accountability mechanisms, particularly regarding anti-corruption, e.g. budget transparency, service delivery analysis, and participation.	http://www.ticambodia.org/citizen-youth-empowerment-programme/
Global Consensus Statement on Youth-led Accountability	General	General	At the 25th anniversary of the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) Restless Development launched a Global Consensus Statement on Youth-Led Accountability.	https://restlessdevelopment.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/FINAL-Global-Consensus-Statement-on-Youth-led-Accountability-.pdf
Youth Leadership, Participation and Accountability 2.0	General	General	Developed by Restless Development, in partnership with UNFPA East & Southern Africa Regional Office (ESARO), following consultations with young people from across East and Southern Africa aimed at identifying how development agencies and young people can better work together to strengthen accountability for Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights (SRHR) and gender equality.	https://esaro.unfpa.org/sites/default/files/pub-pdf/Youth%20Leadership%20Participation%20and%20Accountability%20-%20The%20Recommendations%201.pdf
Roadmap for Localizing the SDGs: Implementation and Monitoring at Sub-National Level	General	General	The Global Taskforce of Local and Regional Governments was set up in 2013 to bring together and coordinate the joint advocacy work of the major international networks of local governments.	https://www.uclg.org/sites/default/files/roadmap_for_localizing_the_sdgs_0.pdf
ActionAid International & OECD Development Communication Network Beyond Smiling Faces: How engaging with youth can help transform societies and achieve the Sustainable Development Goals	General	General	Policy Note	https://www.oecd.org/development/pgd/OECD_AA%20Youth%20Policy%20Note_141015.pdf

Goalkeepers Youth Action Accelerator	General	General	A multiyear campaign dedicated to accelerating progress towards the UN Sustainable Development Goals. Using powerful stories, data, and partnerships, Goalkeepers highlights progress achieved, holds governments accountable, and brings together a new generation of leaders to address the world's major challenges.	https://www.civicus.org/index.php/what-we-do/innovate/actionaccelerator
From injustice to justice: Participation of Marginalised Children in Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (2019)	General	General	An academic paper making the case for youth-led social accountability as a vital mechanism for achieving the SDGs, for when children are intentionally enabled to participate in seeking accountability, they can influence their families, communities and governments to value their contributions and increase their well-being.	https://www.researchgate.net/publication/337048781_From_injustice_to_justice_Participation_of_Marginalised_Children_in_Achieving_the_Sustainable_Development_Goals
Never too young to change the world: 20 Sudanese youth embark on a journey to advocate for the SDGs in Sudan (2018)	Sudan	Africa	A blog post detailing the involvement of 20 Young Sudanese in the development of an advocacy program for the SDGs, focused on raising awareness, organising community-based awareness programs, and social media outreach.	https://www.sd.undp.org/content/sudan/en/home/blog/2018/Never-too-young-to-change-the-world.html
UN Youth Delegate Guide (2020)	Thailand	Asia Pacific	An information pamphlet for prospective youth delegates to the UN General Assembly outlines the criteria and responsibilities for Thailand's young delegates (p. 44). An example of the type of formal and institutionalised youth social accountability in the international forum.	https://www.un.org/development/desa/youth/wp-content/uploads/sites/21/2020/05/Youth-Delegates-Guide-May-2020-WEB-1.pdf
ActionAid Zimbabwe Country Strategy Paper 2018-2023 (2018)	Zimbabwe	Africa	On p.17 is reference to the involvement of young people, particularly women, in decision making platforms for service delivery, e.g. attending council meetings, feedback meetings and budget formulation processes. On p.25 are recommendations for CSO progress.	https://zimbabwe.actionaid.org/sites/zimbabwe/files/publications/ActionAid%20Zimbabwe%20Strategy%202018%20to%202023.pdf
United Nations in Pakistan celebrate International Youth Day 2020	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	Online seminar focusing on "Breaking Barriers for Meaningful Youth Engagement"	https://www.pk.undp.org/content/pakistan/en/home/presscenter/pressreleases/2020/united-nations-in-pakistan-celebrate-international-youth-day-2020.html
Jordan National Youth Strategy 2019-2025	Jordan	Arab States	A policy document by the Ministry of Youth in Jordan outlining the National policies, strategies, action plan and programs for Jordanian youth inline with the themes of the National Youth Strategy.	https://moy.gov.jo/sites/default/files/jordan_national_youth_strategy_2019-2025_english_compressed_1.pdf
Jordan 2025, A National Vision and Strategy	Jordan	Arab States	A long-term National Vision and Strategy entailing policies and procedures that should be implemented through participatory approach between the government, business sector and civil society.	https://www.greengrowthknowledge.org/national-documents/jordan-2025-national-vision-and-strategy

Citizen's Position Paper, A Multi Stakeholder Pathway towards Food Security and Sustainable Food System in Pakistan March 2021	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	Recommendation paper by AwazCDS and VSO in Pakistan for national food security policies with the participation of 56 university students in the consultations. The recommendations were generated in response to the UN Secretary General's call to convene the Food Systems Summit.	https://awazcads.org.pk/wp-content/uploads/2021/07/Position_Paper_web.pdf
Clean and Green Jobs Innovation Challenge Sindh	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	Concept note for climate change challenge at the University of Lahore in collaboration with the Ministry of Climate Change. This is an example of a platform to promote and support youth-based start-ups and innovations.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJ08EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=Clean+and+Green+Jobs+Innovation+Challenge+Sindh+2021_updated.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
Potential Site map for Youth Policy Lab: Youth Policy Lab	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	Platform where young people, policy stakeholders and civil society actors can get access to conversations, ideas, databases, and opportunities around meaningful youth engagement in Pakistan.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJ08EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=Jawan+Awaaz+(Facebook+Group)+Concept+Note.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1 ; https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJ08EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=Youth+Policy+Lab+(Volunteer+Assignment+Brief).docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
Youth Engagement: Community of Practice	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A concept note by UN agencies to establish a Youth Engagement Community of Practice (CoP), inspired by the model used by UNESCO, with the objective to bring youth together belonging to diverse backgrounds, for a long-term association and cooperation, on a platform with well-defined roles, and a strategic actionable work plan.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJ08EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=Youth+Community+of+Practice+-+Concept+Note+2020.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
Analysis of Regulatory Framework for Entrepreneurs Focusing on the Three Most Potential Sectors, Proposing Simplified Procedures for Young Entrepreneurs (October 2016)	Serbia	Europe & Central Asia	A study by the Economic Institute in Belgrade and the Ministry of Youth in Serbia in response to the high unemployment rates. The study analysis the situation, identify gaps and challenges for youth and suggest measures for action.	https://www.mos.gov.rs/public/ck/uploads/files/MOS_ENG_Preduzetnistvo%20mladih_FINALNA%20VERZIJA%2024.10.2016.pdf

RESOURCE TYPE:

Reports

CREDIT: ActionAid

Reports

Source Title	Country	Region	Short description and relevance to the study	How to access
Our Research, Our Rights: Ending violence against children through the lens of child researchers (2020)	Brazil	Latin America & Caribbean	A report written by child researchers themselves, from the Young People Monitoring Public Policy group (p. 16-18). Their mission is to engage young people in social accountability mechanisms and participate in public policy debates.	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/17670/pdf/dear_wvi_child_led_report_final.pdf
Child Participation and Accountability in Save the Children Colombia's Programming (2015)	Colombia	Latin America & Caribbean	A joint Save the Children report; explores the challenges and opportunities in implementing child participation in social accountability programming the Colombian context. The research analysed the ways that children can meaningfully participate in Save the Children Colombia programs.	https://rli.sas.ac.uk/sites/default/files/files/RLI%20Child%20participation%20ENG%20FINAL.pdf
Youth-led Accountability for the SDGs	General	General	The report focuses on the national and subnational recommendations and looks at how youth-led accountability can be implemented and operationalised across the Commonwealth context.	https://thecommonwealth.org/sites/default/files/inline/Commonwealth%20report.pdf
Young people's engagement in strengthening accountability for the post-2015 agenda	General	General	This report argues that young people – young women and young men aged 15 to 24 years – should be an integral part of any post-2015 accountability framework.	https://www.un.org/youthenvoy/wp-content/uploads/2014/09/YouthAccountabilitypost-2015Report.pdf
Child-responsive Accountability	General	General	This paper links the concept and practice of accountability with child rights, by asking: (1) What accountability means when children are the rights holders, and whose role is it to exact that accountability? (2) What are the assumptions underpinning social accountability, and how can they be revised from the child-rights perspective? (3) How do social and political dynamics at community and national levels, often not linked to child rights issues, shape accountability outcomes?	https://www.unicef-irc.org/publications/690-child-responsive-accountability-lessons-from-social-accountability.html
Media for Next Generation Peacebuilding in Iraq (2009)	Iraq	Arab States	Describes a project in which young people are given the opportunity to directly contribute to media programs, the idea being that they can express their concerns about the issues that matter to them, raising awareness and generating necessary accountability tools in the process (p. 2).	https://www.usip.org/sites/default/files/iraq_youth_media_0.pdf
Jordan: Supporting Youth Engagement and Participation (P161834) (2018)	Jordan	Arab States	A detailed report by the World Bank on the state of youth engagement and participation in Jordan, including many examples of projects to strengthen youth accountability, such as youth monitoring of municipal services.	https://documents1.worldbank.org/curated/es/352031546011439169/Jordan-Youth-Engagement-Summary-Report-20180507.docx

Jordan: United Nations Sustainable Development Framework, UN Country Results Report (2019)	Jordan	Arab States	Speaks to efforts within Jordan to engage young people in sustainable development with a focus on participation in decision making (p. 37). There are a number of examples of promising online platforms that encourage young people to voice their concerns on socioeconomic issues.	https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/Annual-Results-Report-Jordan-2019-UNSD-Final.pdf
Youth Well-Being Policy Review of Jordan (2018)	Jordan	Arab States	An OECD report investigating human development of young Jordanians. There is reference to the measures being undertaken by the government to make it easier for young people to hold elected officials accountable, specifically the Voice of Jordanian Youth, a debating platform facilitating young Jordanians engagement in local, Arab and international issues (p. 69).	https://www.oecd.org/dev/inclusivesocietiesanddevelopment/Youth_well_being_policy_review_Jordan.pdf
Adolescent and Youth Situation Analysis: Lao People's Democratic Republic (2014)	Lao PDR	Asia Pacific	Gives an appraisal of the involvement of young people in Lao in civil society. It speaks to the strength of certain groups but ultimately concludes that young people rarely have the opportunity to contribute to decisions about their lives, especially in rural areas (p. 55-57).	https://lao.unfpa.org/sites/default/files/pub-pdf/Final_Eng_AYSA%20Report.pdf
Lao PDR: Progress and challenges in delivering rights and choices for all from Cairo to Nairobi and beyond (2020)	Lao PDR	Asia Pacific	Includes a brief summary of how the UNDP is engaging the youth in Lao to act on the SDGs, including the Accelerator Lab Laos which aims at empowering young people to take the lead in innovating solutions and monitoring.	https://laopdr.un.org/en/35778-lao-pdr-progress-and-challenges-delivering-rights-and-choices-all-cairo-nairobi-and-beyond
Youth Advocacy Network Pakistan: Annual Report (2019)	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A summative report by a youth advocacy organisation that helps young people participate in policy formation. Their aim is to build the capacity of young people so that they can play active roles as agents of change in their community, specifically with regards to the SDGs (3-5, 8, 10, 13, 16).	https://yan.org.pk/wp-content/uploads/2021/01/YAN-Annual-Report-2019.pdf
Advancing Civil Society Led Participatory Governance in Rwanda (2018)	Rwanda	Africa	Speaks to the challenges that young people face in getting their voices heard in Rwanda, but refers to a number of initiatives, like radio shows, that foster a dialogue between youth and local leaders.	https://www.sfcg.org/advancing-civil-society-led-participatory-governance-in-rwanda/
Voluntary National Review of the Republic of Serbia on the Implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (2018)	Serbia	Europe & Central Asia	Young people appear to have played an important role in the development of this VNR. p.14 outlines this involvement, which included youth consultations with the Ombudsman, UNICEF-facilitated digital surveys and petitions. All of this meant that young people had a meaningful opportunity to provide their views on SDGs and the progress made in their achievement.	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/23471Serbia_VNR_Report_2019_final.pdf

Pathways to accountability for women and marginalised groups in the Somali context: The role of non-state actors (2018)	Somalia	Africa	Finds that opportunities for young people (and other marginalised identities) to engage in social accountability mechanisms in Somalia is limited. On p.14 the report recognises that young people are nonetheless well represented in CSOs and are most likely to be involved in direct action like protest marches. Speaks to an as-yet-unrealised potential for youth engagement.	https://www.sddirect.org.uk/media/1622/final-gesi-learning-brief_web.pdf
United Nations Population Fund Country programme document for Somalia (2021)	Somalia	Africa	As above, the report acknowledges the need to create and support youth-led platforms by engaging young people in the design, implementation and evaluation of social development programs, but does not cite any examples (p.5-6).	https://www.unfpa.org/sites/default/files/board-documents/DP.FPA_CPD_SOM_4_-_Somalia_CPD_-_DRAFT_final_-_9Nov20.pdf
Somalia Human Development Report: Empowering Youth for Peace and Development (2012)	Somalia	Africa	Speaks to the limitations of youth-led CSOs in Somalia, particularly the extent to which they exclude the voices of young women, the inability of government agencies to engage with their demands, and lack of participatory monitoring systems (p. 84).	http://hdr.undp.org/sites/default/files/reports/242/somalia_report_2012.pdf
Youth as Agents of Peace: Somalia (2018)	Somalia	Africa	Another example of the exclusion of young people from accountability mechanisms for peacebuilding in Somalia, namely a lack of awareness of how to be involved, a lack of inclusivity, scope of NGO efficacy, and lack of quality examples (p. 45 - 47).	https://documents1.worldbank.org/curated/en/463921526414702925/pdf/126251-WP-P152600-PUBLIC-Youth-As-Agents-of-Peace-Somalia.pdf
United Republic of Tanzania: Voluntary National Review (2019)	Tanzania	Africa	In an example of society wide accountability mechanisms (PETs) on p.98, there is also reference to the role of young people, specifically about their involvement in decision making processes.	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/23429VNR_Report_Tanzania_2019_FINAL.pdf
Thailand's Voluntary National Review on the Implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (June 2017)	Thailand	Asia Pacific	A detailed report on Thailand's progress toward implementing the SDGs on how young people are engaged as stakeholders, and the public consultation platforms that they were able to participate in (p. 4). There is also discussion of how SDG awareness is raised among the youth (p. 5).	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/16147Thailand.pdf
Thailand's Voluntary National Review on the Implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (2021)	Thailand	Asia Pacific	The 2nd Voluntary National Review with greater focus on youth social accountability with a strong case study (p. 28). Importantly, numerous youth networks (Youth Council of Thailand, Youth in Charge, The Voice of Youth) contributed their views on how Thailand is performing on the SDGs (see p.77 - 78), including recommendations.	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/279482021_VNR_Report_Thailand.pdf
United Nations Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework: Uzbekistan (2021)	Uzbekistan	Europe & Central Asia	Recognises the importance of young people being able to provide feedback on Government decisions, programs and institutions in generating accountability for the SDGs, especially in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic (p. 22). The UNCT Youth Advisory Board is referenced (p. 45) as a key channel for youth voices in Uzbekistan.	https://unece.org/sites/default/files/2021-05/Uzbekistan-UNSDCF-2021-2025.pdf

Viet Nam's Voluntary National Review on The Implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (2018)	Viet Nam	Asia Pacific	Though youth-organisations were included in the development of this VNR (a form of accountability itself, a footnote (p.24) says that ¾ of young Vietnamese 'have never heard of the SDGs before'.	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/19967VNR_of_Viet_Nam.pdf
Zimbabwe Voluntary National Review (VNR) of SDGs for the High Level Political Forum (2017)	Zimbabwe	Africa	Overview of how young people participated in this VNR, and how they continue to implement and monitor SDG programs (p. 14).	https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/15866Zimbabwe.pdf
Youth Led Policy Forum 2019	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A report on the youth-led policy forum initiative in 2019 by the School of Leadership Foundation in collaboration with UNDP and UNICEF bringing together youth participants from Pakistan to discuss youth policies.
Citizens Voices and Voluntary National Review and Status on SDG in Pakistan March 2019	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A supporting report for the 2019 VNR in Pakistan. The report shares multi-stakeholders opinions regarding progress on the implementation of six SDGs.	https://awazcnds.org.pk/citizens-voices-on-voluntary-national-review-status-of-sdgs-in-pakistan-2019/
List of VSO Pakistan Publications for UN Youth Research	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	List of SDGs and Youth Related Initiative reports by Voluntary Service Overseas.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAcWlh84XFFJECGKXUoXpUH-a?dl=0&amp;preview=List+of+VSO+Pakistan+publications+for+UN+Youth+Research.docx
Project Report on Empowering Youth Voices for Inclusive Policy Making 2019	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A project report for VSO and UNDP initiative Youth Dialogue for Policy Impact, the reports list the challenges faced by youth in Pakistan including poor monitoring and accountability (P. 9). In the recommendation on (P. 14) , there are calls to encourage social accountability and build capacities around it.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAcWlh84XFFJECGKXUoXpUH-a?dl=0&amp;preview=Youth+Voices-UNDP.pdf
Generation Equality Event: Inter-generational Dialogue on Harnessing the Voices of the Youth in Ending GBV and Harmful Practices (June 2021)	Kenya	Africa	Keynote speakers emphasized the role youth play in ending GBV. In the declaration of the outcome document, accountability has been emphasized as an important role for youth to claim their rights.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/oze236xe67ywahh/AA3lXqat28oIXJ4c6O_LMvCa?dl=0&amp;preview=GENERATION+EQUALITY+FORUM+EVENT+.pdf
Youth Voices Matter: Regional Youth Consultations with Local Governors 2019 Report	Uzbekistan	Europe & Central Asia	A summary for the four regional youth consultations that were conducted in Uzbekistan in response to a presidential initiative to establish a constructive regular dialogue with young people.	https://www.unicef.org/uzbekistan/en/press-releases/youth-voice-matters
Adolescent Girls in West and Central Africa	General	General	Short Report by UNICEF on the progress for adolescent girls in the past two decades, challenges, opportunities as well as current programs carried on by UN agencies and their implementing partners.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/4mmhwgru45ny6ec/AAcQ9xj_RnZiz6Mng_ov4zU-a?dl=0&amp;preview=12971977557+investment+case+for+girls+country_profile_STP_ENG+(003).pdf
National Technical Vocational Education and Training Policy 2017-2025	Cambodia	Asia Pacific	A government framework to develop a strategy in technical vocational education and training (TVET) for workforces which better responds to the labor market demand.	http://tvetsdp.ntb.gov.kh/wp-content/uploads/2018/02/NTVET-Policy-2017-2025_ENG_.pdf

Youth Empowerment Report 2021	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A policy recommendation document incorporating youth perspectives from consultation groups. The report highlight the challenged and recommended interventions in different thematic areas.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJO8EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=20210815+-+YEP+Draft+Report+Clean.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
SDG Bootcamps for Social Enterprises and Social Enterprise Awareness Sessions Inception Report	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	An Inception report by the School of Leadership Foundation on the details of the implementation methodology of the Bootcamps for Social Enterprise Awareness sessions project.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJO8EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=Inception+Report.pdf&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
Pakistan Youth Development Index 2021	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A data result report for a questionnaire conducted by Jawan Kamyab and UNDP for a group of youth in Pakistan.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJO8EVcSrmTxra/UN?dl=0&amp;preview=YDI+Dashboard+Descriptive+Report+with+Insights+v1.0.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
Youth and Climate Change Perception Report	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A report by the Ministry of Climate Change and UNDP outlining the results of a survey to gauge the perception and knowledge regarding climate change among the youth of Pakistan. In the final recommendation it is advised that Youth needs to be at the table from policy formulation to its execution.	https://www.pk.undp.org/content/pakistan/en/home/library/environment_energy/youth-and-climate-change-perception-report.html
UN Youth Advisory Group (2021)	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	An overview of the UNYAG from Albania, referring specifically to its members and SDGs they work toward. This group was established in 2021 which suggests that the formal/institutionalised involvement of young people in social accountability mechanisms is new.	https://albania.un.org/index.php/en/130664-un-youth-advisory-group
UNFPA: A discussion about Youth Mainstreaming in Formal Policy-Making (2020)	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	An online event with 22 young Albanians, discussing how young people can achieve effective inclusion and participation in decision making; reflecting on the engagement of youth in policy discussions at the local, national and international levels; promoting youth agency and their priorities. Video of discussions available on link provided.	https://albania.un.org/en/95458-unfpa-discussion-about-youth-mainstreaming-formal-policy-making
National Youth Action Plan, 2015-2020 (2015)	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	A comprehensive plan (albeit now dated), written in conjunction with young Albanians, which sets out the various challenges to - and the ways to achieve - the meaningful inclusion of young people in all aspects of Albania's socioeconomic development. See 'Youth Promotion and Participation in Democratic Processes/Decision Making' (p.10).	https://albania.un.org/sites/default/files/2020-05/no.41-%20plani%20kombetar%20i%20veprimit%20per%20rinine%202015-2020_ENG.pdf
Where Pakistan Stands on Implementation of SDGs 2018	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	An assessment report for the performance of Pakistan's cities and their stand on the SDGs.	https://awazcds.org.pk/where-pakistan-stands-on-sdgs-2018/

Encuesta de Percepción de Adolescentes y Jóvenes sobre conictividad en torno a COVID-19 / Perception survey of adolescents and youth on conflict related to COVID-19	Guatemala	Latin America &amp; Caribbean	Quantitative survey produced by UNDP carried out through phone and social media platforms with youth across Guatemala. The overview report presents youth views on conflict stemming from issues related to COVID-19. (Spanish language)	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S71hGnn05Jlmmvq_rkHtrE8jMBH
Diagnóstico Generación con Memoria / Diagnostic report for 'Generation who remembers'	Guatemala	Latin America &amp; Caribbean	A diagnostic report produced for the project 'We are a generation who remembers'. It uses a mixed methods approach with youth in project locations related to conflict, historical memory and peace. The survey was implemented through virtual discussions and workshops with youth, combined with an action research approach in which youth were also researchers. The document presents this methodology along with the findings of the study. Supported by UNDP. (Spanish language)	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S71hGnn05Jlmmvq_rkHtrE8jMBH

RESOURCE TYPE:

Tools

CREDIT: ActionAid

Tools

All resources are in English.

Source Title	Country	Region	Short description and relevance to the study	How to access
Youth Leadership, Partnership and Accountability 2.0	General	General	Restless Development, in partnership with UNFPA, and with young people from across East and Southern Africa, have developed tools and recommendations for strengthening youth-led accountability, and a model for how to implement these.	https://restlessdevelopment.org/2020/06/youth-leadership/
A Roadmap on Harnessing the Demographic Dividend Through Investments in Youth	General	General	Developed with the participation of youth, serves as an accountability framework committing countries to report on progress.	https://edu-au.org/downloads/Strategic%20Documents%20and%20Frameworks/AU%20Roadmap%20on%20Harnessing%20the%20Demographic%20Dividend%20through%20Investments%20in%20the%20Youth/AU%202017%20DD%20ROADMAP%20Final_en.pdf
Youth Family Planning Scorecard	General	General	Measures and compares countries' youth focal point policies and programming.	https://scorecard.prb.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/06/Youth-Family-Planning-Scorecard-2020-English.pdf
UNICEF Youth Advocacy Guide	General	General	The Youth Advocacy Guide seeks to help youth tackle the problems they see in their communities. It was co-created with young African citizens with the aim of empowering young people with skills to bring about positive change in their lives and communities. The Youth Advocacy Guide represents the personal views of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the position of the United Nations Children's Fund.	https://reliefweb.int/sites/reliefweb.int/files/resources/youth_advocacy_guide_high_res.pdf
Jawan Awaaz (youth voice): listening to the young people of Pakistan	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	An online platform on Facebook an independent youth focused and led space for remaining connected with alumni and current beneficiaries of the Youth Empowerment Program (YEP) at UNDP Pakistan. to maximise reach to young people including those with access to internet and social media in rural and peri urban areas across Pakistan.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/hjksd0ulwivt19w/AAD0BT6EOHVyJ08EVcSrmTxraUN?dl=0&amp;preview=Jawan+Awaaz+(Facebook+Group)+Concept+Note.docx&amp;subfolder_nav_tracking=1
General Children's Participation Criteria: Sectoral Guideline and Instruments for Ensuring Children's Meaningful Participation (2018)	Albania	Europe & Central Asia	Discusses how and in what ways children in Albania are meaningfully included in decision-making processes to help promote voice and capabilities, specific reference to education (p.33), health (p.33), juvenile justice (p.34), and local power (p.35).	https://resourcecentre.savethechildren.net/node/15984/pdf/general_criteria_of_child_participation.pdf

Accountability in Action Toolkit	General	General	Practical guide for young people tracking the Global Goals. It is available in four languages- English, French, Swahili and Nepali.	https://restlessdevelopment.org/2020/06/accountability-in-action-toolkit/
Local2030: Localizing the SDGs	General	General	Local 2030 partners are sharing tools, experiences, new solutions and guides to support SDG localization. A core feature is the toolbox, which contains a range of concrete, practical and adaptable mechanisms and instruments that support the development, implementation, monitoring and review of locally-appropriate SDG actions.	https://www.local2030.org/about-us.php
Seeing from our perspectives: youth budget advocacy in Ghana (2011)	Ghana	Africa	Examines the experiences of a youth budget advocacy process in Ghana done by Plan Ghana and Integrated Social Development Centre. It describes a participatory youth budgeting training process, and how the youth then went on to apply what they learnt.	https://pubs.iied.org/sites/default/files/pdfs/migrate/G03202.pdf
A Citizens Scorecard on the SDGs and the State of Marginalisation	Kenya	Africa	Key Findings and recommendations.	https://www.socialwatch.org/node/18510
Leveraging Innovations within Media and Technology to reaching Persons with Disabilities with SRHR Information	Kenya	Africa	Creating SRHR sign language content, innovating a dedicated Sign language mobile App and leveraging of Digital and media space for content dissemination for persons with disabilities.	https://sdgs.un.org/partnerships/leveraging-innovations-within-media-and-technology-reach-deaf-youths-srhr-information
United Nations Youth Association of Kenya	Kenya	Africa	Varied resources to help youth get involved with UN-related activities in their communities and beyond, and build the capacity of their grassroots organizations.	https://www.unyakenya.org/downloads
SDGs Citizens Scorecard	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	The SDGs Citizens' Scorecard is a citizen centric tool to track and measure the progress and challenges in achieving Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Government and CSOs in Pakistan are already well aware regarding the importance of Citizens' Scorecard and its impacts on policy reforms, strategy formulation, identifying priorities & missing links as well as opportunities, tracking progress & operational gaps, performance measurements, creating healthy competitions etc.	https://sdgscitizenscorecard.pda.net.pk  http://pda.net.pk/wp-content/uploads/2020/04/SDGs-Citizens-Score-Card-Questionnaires.pdf
Global Goals Local Impact project	Tanzania	Africa	Tanzania case study p. 28.	https://www.data4sdgs.org/sites/default/files/2017-09/Making%20Use%20of%20Citizen-Generated%20Data%20-%20Data4SDGs%20Toolbox%20Module.pdf

ICPD 25 Youth Engagement Toolkit	Jordan	Arab States	Toolkit utilized to work with youth delegation who is part of Jordan delegation to the ICPD (International Conference on Population and Development)	https://www.nairobi summit icpd.org/sites/default/files/files/ICPD25%20Youth%20Engagement%20Toolkit%281%29.pdf
My Body, My Life, My World Through a COVID-19 Lens	Jordan	Arab States	UNFPA's approach to upholding the sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) of adolescents and youth is encapsulated in its global strategy My Body, My Life, My World, the report is enclosed technical briefs and provides practical guidance for supporting countries to reimagine, adapt and supplement the diverse range of interventions to protect SRHR.	https://www.unfpa.org/featured-publication/my-body-my-life-my-world-through-covid-19-lens
Podium-Delivery Guide Workshop	Kosovo	Europe & Central Asia	A tool by Innovation Lab Kosovo for youth and adolescents aged 14-25 to empower them to lead the design, development, and implementation of youth-led social change projects.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/4mmhwgru45ny6ec/AACQ9xj_RnZiz6Mng_ov4zU-a?dl=0&amp;preview=1.+PODIUM+Facilitation+guide.pdf
Participant Guide for Adolescents Capacity Building Sessions	Pakistan	Asia Pacific	A tool developed in partnership with UNICEF to create the space for adolescents and youth to explore creative ideas and actions using innovation and interesting channels to contribute towards the response of COVID 19.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/4mmhwgru45ny6ec/AACQ9xj_RnZiz6Mng_ov4zU-a?dl=0&amp;preview=12898012398_Participant%27s+Guide.+Adolescents.+28Jan2021.ML_gf.docx
Technical Guide for digital setup and User Activities	General	General	A technical guide provides step-by-step instructions on how to effectively deliver a fully virtual cycle of UPSHIFT using only digital tools and online platform.	https://www.dropbox.com/sh/4mmhwgru45ny6ec/AACQ9xj_RnZiz6Mng_ov4zU-a?dl=0&amp;preview=12910911518_eUPSHIFT+Digitisation+technical+setup.pdf
Diplomado 'Ética Pública y Transparencia para la Buena Gobernanza' (Diploma in Public Ethics and Transparency for Good Governance)	Guatemala	Latin America & Caribbean	An overview of training modules developed for use with young people at the university level, with the aim of promoting a culture of ethics, transparency and accountability and supporting young people to promote the values of anticorruption and accountability in their future work. Includes seven modules covering on civics, governance and accountability topics. (Spanish language)	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S711hGnn05Jlmmvq_rkHtrE8jMBH
Proceso formativo 'Somos una Generación con memoria' / Training approach for 'We are a generation who remembers'	Guatemala	Latin America & Caribbean	Encapsulates the training scheme for the project 'Generación con Memoria'. The training is intended for use with young people at municipal level and was developed based on assessments made by youth through a series of workshops on democracy and human rights. The document provides an overview and structure of the course content, including 4 modules delivered over 8 sessions on a range of peacebuilding topics, intended to be delivered virtually.	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S711hGnn05Jlmmvq_rkHtrE8jMBH

Segundo entregable: Mapa de derechos (Somos una Generación con memoria) / Second Deliverable: Rights Map (We are a generation who remembers)	Guatemala	Latin America &amp; Caribbean	Specific activity tool for 'We are a generation who remembers', for use at the mid-point of the course. The four-page tool aims to promote reflection on the key topics covered in the course by supporting participants to develop a map of their experience of human rights in their communities through a series of facilitated exercises. This tool forms part of the larger 'We are a generation who remembers' course, all of which is designed to be delivered virtually. (Spanish language)	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S711hGnnO5Jlmmvq_rkHtcrE8jMBH
Cuarto entregable Nota de voz de las juventudes de hoy, para las del futuro (Somos una Generación con memoria) / Fourth Deliverable: Voice Notes from today's youth, for the future (We are a generation who remembers)	Guatemala	Latin America &amp; Caribbean	Specific activity tool for 'We are a generation who remembers', for use at the end of the course. The tool aims to promote reflection on the key topics covered in the course by supporting participants to create voice notes for future generations of youth on the importance of defending human rights through transformative leadership. This tool forms part of the larger 'We are a generation who remembers' course, all of which is designed to be delivered virtually. (Spanish language)	https://drive.google.com/drive/u/0/folders/1xu9S711hGnnO5Jlmmvq_rkHtcrE8jMBH

